Aid to Peron By Indirect U. S. Loans Considered

Argentine Treasury Minister Settling Grievances Here; Treaty Discussed

Government agencies here are considering economic help to prop up the Peron government in Argentina and, perhaps, to start a new era in Argentine-American relations.

President Peron's brisk and energetic Treasury Minister, Ramon Cereijo, is now in this country, and has all but swept some American officials off their feet with his promises of better treatment for American businessmen in his country.

He has already settled the grievances of half a dozen big American companies. He has started negotiations for a treaty guaranteeing fair treatment to American investors in the future.

He has even conveyed Peron's assurances that the two world-famous Argentine newspapers, La Prensa and La Nacion, can continue publication and will get ample newsprint as soon as Argentina's dollar shortage is eased.

Direct U. S. Loan Not Asked

Cereijo has said he does not want a direct government loan. But he has outlined two forms of indirect help which, State Department officials believe, would be sound policy from the American standpoint.

One would be American Government participation, presumably through the Export-Import Bank, in a syndicate of private bankers to lend American exporters 109 million dollars which Argentina still owes them. This amount is the remaining portion of a 200-million-dollar debt piled up during the regime of Miguel Miranda, the former economic dictator in Argentina.

The other form of help would be a straight credit to American manufacturers of farm machinery to finance exports to Argentina. A serious drought in the past year has added to Peron's difficulties, and necessitates a more intensive development of Argentina's farm resources.

No Specific Application

The Export-Import Bank has not yet had any specific application from Cereijo, but it has sought and received a mass of information on Argentina's general economic situation. The bank is also examining the nature of possible American help, although its discussions were said yesterday to be in an "exceedingly preliminary stage."

On broad policy grounds, then, the State Department has made up its mind that the United States should help Peron; on economic and other grounds, the Export-Import Bank has not yet made up its mind; and the National Advisory Council, which has the last word on American foreign lending, has not yet been consulted.

The idea of economic help for Peron is an outgrowth of (1) a 1000 Battle Woodland Blaze For 7 Hours Near Laurel, Md.

By Phillip J. Austensen and Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporters

A woodland blaze whipped by high winds burned out an 800-acre section of the Agriculture Department's Beltsville Research Center yesterday before a firefighting force of almost 1000 got it under control.

At one time in the seven-hour battle, the fire had a front of between 4 and 5 miles. It was contained, however, within a few miles south of Laurel, Md.

The fire jumped roads and streams, trapping three University of Maryland youths in a creek for half an hour while flames swept from one bank to the other over their heads.

Declared under control at 6:30 p. m. by A. J. Pickall, Laurel District forester, the blaze broke out occasionally thereafter.

Pickall estimated the loss of timber would run between $8000 and $10,000.

Some 250 soldiers from the Third Cavalry at nearby Fort Meade were detailed as firefighters, while 15 Prince Georges County volunteer fire departments responded.

Other civilians brought the total of persons fighting the forest fire to close to 1000.

Crime Probe Plan Strikes Senate Snarl

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A new snarl developed yesterday in the Senate's projected "full and complete" investigation of interstate gambling and crime.

Senate Democratic leaders stepped in to try to iron out the hiatus after:

1. Senate Interstate Commerce Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) asked the Senate to authorize a separate investigation of organized gambling.

2. Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), author of an earlier resolution already cleared by the Rules and Judiciary Committees, was blocked again in an effort to get it before the Senate.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) invited Kefauver to appear before a special meting of the Democratic Policy Committee today or Thursday to decide whether there shall be dual investigations, or how the conflict can be reconciled.

Johnson based his motion for a separate Interstate Commerce inquiry on two bills aimed at organized gambling sent to Congress Saturday by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath.

Vice President Barkley referred both bills to Johnson's committee. They banned (1) shipment of slot machines to States which outlaw them and (2) interstate transmission of gambling information on horse races, football, baseball, basketball or any other sporting event.

Kefauver commended the Attorney General, and called the bills

Census Counters Tick Off 75,000 A Day in District

District residents to the number of 75,000 are being checked off daily in the census, supervisors estimated, as the third day of the Nation's nose-count ended yesterday.

The figure was based on the assumption that the 750-odd enumerators have hit a stride of 100 interviews a day apiece.

If this rate is maintained, the local census of 875,000 to 900,000 individuals should be completed at the end of next week, after 13 working days.

One enumerator who is ahead of schedule was reported to have earned $33.04 for two days' work. It was the first hearing for Kenneth W. Spencer, newly appointed member of the commission.

The Federation of Citizens Associations was granted leave to intervene in the case, and the PUC will decide later on a similar request by the Washington chapter, Americans for Democratic Action.

Eight of the 27 witnesses concentrated their fire on the discontinuance of the weekly pass, pleading hardship primarily.

They were Alfred A. McGarraghy, vice president, Washington Restaurant Association; Thomas B. Scott, Northwest Council of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Geraldine C. Duncan and C. Leigh Hibbard,

Sultan Hamid II Arrested as Head Of Indonesia Plot

Jakarta Java, U. S. I., (Wednesday) April 5 (AP).—Truckloads of military and civil police swooped down on the Hotel Des Indes today and arrested Sultan Hamid II, a cabinet member and president of West Borneo.

A cabinet statement accused the young statesman of being the real leader of the attempt last January to overthrow the government of the United States of Indonesia.

The announcement said evidence from other persons arrested for plotting showed the 37-year-old sultan not only was involved with the attempt of Capt. R. P. P. (Turk) Westerling to smash the regime, but was "in fact the leader of it."

Truman Names T. K. Finletter Air Force Head

Key West, Fla., April 4 (AP).—Thomas Knight Finletter, long-time champion of a 70-group Air Force, was named by President Truman today as Secretary for Air.

A distinguished New York attorney and frequent State Department adviser, Finletter suceeds W. Stuart Symington, shifted by the President to the long-vacant chairmanship of the National Security Resources Board.

Mr. Truman signed Finletter's nomination this afternoon at the "Winter White House" and forwarded it to Washingon by air for submission to the Senate for its confirmation.

The appointment was one of a series of major shifts in the Truman Administration worked out since the President left Washington March 12 for a month-long vacation here.

They included the appointment of Budget Director Frank Pace, jr., as Secretary of the Army and Assistant Director Frederick J. Lawton as his successor.

Finletter was chairman of the President's Air Policy Commission which drafted the Finletter Report in 1948, recommending, among other things, the building of a 70-group Air Force capable of meeting a possible atomic attack by January 1, 1953. Symington, too, has advocated 70 groups as necessary to the Nation's defense.

Mr. Truman has consistently fought to hold the projected Air Force to 48 groups in spite of a contrary view by Congress.

Soldier Home To Be Cut Up For Hospital

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Plans for partitioning the United States Soldiers' Home land here to give Washington its proposed medical center and a new veterans' hospital were announced yesterday.

The proposed redevelopment of the choice, 400-acre tract in north central Washington would:

1. Allot the Veterans Administration 83 acres, 44 of which would be used for an area veterans' hospital, and the remaining 39 acres for a VA office building to handle all VA area activities.

2. Provide 47 acres for the long-sought land for a medical center here, consolidating present services of Emergency, Episcopal and Garfield Hospitals. Up until yesterday, backers of such a consolidation were seeking land of the Naval Observatory, in northwest Washington.

3. Continue virtually all the present facilities of the Soldiers' Home at the northern bulk of the present reservation.

Disclosed by GSA

The plan, first disclosed by the the General Services Administration and later officially announced by the Army, would leave the Soldiers' Home with approximately 252 acres. The remaining 18 acres cut out by the proposed partitioning would be used for the extension of two District streets for division of the three facilities, and ready access to them.

The new roadways would provide for extension of North Capitol st. completely through the reservation, and a divisional road running north in extension of 1st st. nw. to the new southern boundary of Soldiers' Home land remaining after the partitioning.

The North Capitol st. roadway, besides joining together the now discontinuous street dividing east and west Washington, would divide the sites of the proposed VA hospital and the VA activities office building. Extension of 1st st. nw., would divide the new medical center site to its west from the VA hospital site.

Legislation to be Sought

The Army, in its announcement, said that budget legislation will be sought to change the character of the Permanent Fund of Soldiers' Home, which has accrued a surplus of some $30,000,000.

The proposed legislation would permit the Treasury Department, custodian of the fund, to recover annually any money in excess of that required for current and future construction plans and operation and maintenance of the home.

Inmates at the home last night registered violent protest to the plan to partition the grounds.

Yesterday's Army announcement said the proposed action was decided upon jointly by the Army, the General Services Administration, Veterans Administration, and the Bureau of the Budget. Decision to make the proposal public at this time, though some details still remain to be ironed out, followed lengthy weekend conferences, a GSA spokesman said.

The news caught at least the secretary of the board of the proposed Washington Medical Center in almost complete surprise. A GSA spokesman, however, said that Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission and president of the nonprofit corporation pushing for the medical

Bridges, 2 Aides Found Guilty; Lawyers Get Jail Sentences

San Francisco, April 4 (AP).—Harry Bridges, president of the big CIO longshore union, was convicted of perjury today.

His two fellow-officers in the union, who helped him get citizenship in 1945, were convicted with him, on two counts of conspiracy. Furthermore, Bridges' two attorneys were sentenced to jail for contempt of court.

The Government said Bridges munist, that the other two union officials supported him.

They were Henry Schmidt, international representative of the Longshoremen's Union, and J. R. Robertson, first vice president.

Each of the three is subjected to a seven-year prison sentence and a fine of $15,000. Further, Bridges was made subject to deportation to Australia, where he was born.

Count one of the indictment charged all three men with conspiracy to defraud the Government in obstructing operations of the naturalization service. Count two was against Bridges, alone, charging him with perjury. Count three was against Schmidt and Robertson, charging them with conspiracy to aid and abet perjury.

The trial opened November 14. The jury of eight men and four women received the case for deliberation last Friday.

Today, at 11:52 a. m. (PST), they took their seats in the big jury box and passed the verdict to the court, after 31 hours of drudging through two million words of testimony.

None of the jurors would say how many ballots they took, or how the voting went.

In their own testimony, Bridges and the other two men denied repeatedly they were or ever had been Communists.

Defense attorneys, after a recess, moved for an arrested judgment—delay in sentencing—and for a retrial. The court set the matter for a hearing at 1 a. m. Monday.

Acheson to Ask Pact Powers To Concert Foreign Policies

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson has decided that the time has come to make the North Atlantic Treaty something more than a military alliance.

He will go to London later this month to persuade the other 11 treaty governments, if he can, to bring their diplomatic policies more closely into line with one another.

Knowing that all 12 treaty nations want the same things—namely, peace and freedom—he will propose that they take a new look at their policies on specific issues to see how well they fit these aims.

One example, presumably, would be the attitude of the 12 treaty governments toward Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, now fighting a bitter political war with the Kremlin. American policy has been to help Tito judiciously, so as to keep him in the fight and to widen his breach with Moscow.

If the other treaty partners agree with this policy, then each will be asked to act toward Tito in line with the over-all purpose. The concerting of political policies might also apply to the Far East, where some of the treaty partners are hopelessly out of step with the others, notably over recognition and trade with Communist China.

Now that the 12 governments have made a start toward a combined military defense, Acheson and his advisers believe the 12 should make a start toward com-

U. S. Removes Ban On Traveling To Yugoslavia

The State Department lifted its three-year-old ban on American travel in Yugoslavia yesterday.

It said American passports for travel in Yugoslavia will be "freely issued" in view of a new American-Yugoslav agreement which went into effect on April 1.

The ban was imposed in 1947 when United States-Yugoslav relations reached their lowest ebb after American planes were shot down over that country.

Relations between Yugoslavia and the Western democracies have been improving steadily since Marshal Tito broke with the Kremlin.

Under the new agreement, Yugoslavia will honor the American passports of persons holding dual nationality. Tito's government had held previously that such persons had to be considered Yugoslav citizens.

Named Attache Here

Mexico City, April 4 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Alberto Salinas Carranza, former head of the Mexican Air Force, was named military attache in Washington today. He will succeed Gen. Leobardo Ruiz, who has been named director of the Mexican Military Academy.

Staff Chiefs Will Restudy Plane Needs

The Joint Chiefs of Staff have been directed to restudy the Administration's 1951 military budget to determine whether plane procurement funds are adequate to keep Air Force and Navy air groups modern.

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, in announcing this resurvey yesterday, told reporters he'd accept the JCS finding—expected next week—and recommend an increase if proposed.

His disclosure came as the House opened a full-dress debate on the sufficiency of the pending defense budget. Democrats and Republicans on the House Armed Services Committee joined in attacking Johnson's cutbacks. Representative George Mahon (D., Tex.) floor manager for this section of the Omnibus Appropriation Bill, defended the total as adequate.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee told the House the Russians are building their air force for an atomic "Pearl Harbor" and proposed adding $583,289,211 for more American combat planes.

While crediting Johnson with making worthwhile economies in the defense forces, Vinson charged he has gone too far.

"In his zeal for economy," said the Georgian, "Secretary Johnson has weakened the national security in very important respects."

Vinson declared it was "an open secret" in Washington that Johnson had first proposed a much smaller defense budget than the 13 billion figure allowed by President Truman. He did not elaborate, but other members of the House committee contended off the floor that the Defense Secretary originally wanted to cut the military budget to 11 billion dollars.

Johnson flatly denied Vinson's

Senator Set To Give Data He 'Considers Of Value'

Information To Help Trace His Sources Denied for Fear of Causing Discharges

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee yesterday asked Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) to turn over to it his files on Government loyalty cases.

Promptly, McCarthy issued an answer which amounts, pretty clearly and as anticipated, to a flat refusal.

He wrote Subcommittee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) that the committee would be supplied with any material which "I consider of value" in aiding it to perform the task assigned to it by the Senate.

Tydings promptly wrote McCarthy a second letter asking him to turn over to the committee by noon today whatever information he is willing to furnish. "We do not desire to know any of your sources unless you feel you can give them to us," he assured McCarthy.

But, presumably, all the material that McCarthy considers of value he has already made available in the form of his testimony to the subcommittee.

And, McCarthy added, he would not give the Tydings committee any information that would help the State Department trace his sources, because the department would fire them.

Previously, in hearings before the subcommittee, McCarthy had made much the same reply to less formal requests that he turn over his data. At that time he said the subcommittee would simply relay any clews they contained as to his informants within the department back to the department.

In addition, McCarthy wrote Tydings yesterday, he would not give the subcommittee any affidavits he had that were made on condition that they be made available only to the FBI.

McCarthy concluded his letter to Tydings with the barbed remark:

"I thought I had made this clear to the chairman and the committee on at least a dozen occasions."

The reference was to his long-sustained argument, while giving testimony, that he would give the committee what he wanted to, in his testimony, and would not give it any further files or "raw data."

The request to McCarthy, still undergoing medical care in the Bethesda Naval Hospital for a sinus ailment, was contained in a letter sent earlier in the day and signed by Tydings. He said the action was approved by all members of the subcommittee.

The letter recalled that in his Senate speech of February 20, in

'Point Four' Fund Approved in Full By Senate Group

By The Associated Press

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted yesterday for a 45-million-dollar "Point Four" program next year but put sharp limits on the plan for developing the world's backward areas.

And it wrote in a provision that the project shall end in five years, on June 30, 1955. The Senators made it tighter by putting a deadline of June 30, 1952, on any contracts under the plan.

Before any operations start the proposal must go through the Senate, be compromised with a sharply differing measure passed by the House, and be backed up by an actual appropriation. So far it is merely an authorization.

Among curbs applied by the Senate committee was the ripping out of all provision for encouragement of private American investment abroad with guarantees for the investors.

"We wanted to confine this program to giving technical skills and assistance to backward areas," Chairman Connally (D., Tex.) told reporters.

"There was a strong feeling that any investment guarantees should be handled in separate legislation."

The committee deleted a section which stated that economic advances could be promoted by negotiations "to establish fair labor standards of wages and working conditions, including the encouragement of collective bargaining between management and labor."

Former Sheriff Pleads Guilty, Admits $22,000 Gaming Graft

Baltimore, Md., April 4 (Spl.).—R. Earle Sheriff, 55-year-old former sheriff of Prince Georges County received about $22,000 from gamblers for "protection" during his four-year term, Judge W. Calvin Chesnut was told today in Federal Court.

Sheriff's collections from gamblers were disclosed by Norman P. Ramsey, assistant United States attorney, after the former Prince Georges County official pleaded guilty to attempted evasion of $10,430 in income taxes for four years beginning in 1943—the same period he served as county sheriff.

The defendant prior to his election in 1943 had served as a deputy sheriff. Subsequent to 1946, he also remained in the office as a deputy but resigned that position at the time of his indictment last month. In Prince Georges County, a sheriff may not succeed himself.

Ramsey, questioned by Judge Chesnut, asserted that the Gov. ernment did not know the names of persons who paid money to Sheriff for "protection" against arrest or prosecution but said the money came from bookmaking, numbers and other gambling sources.

Sheriff told internal revenue agents that he received the money in envelopes from "runners" for the gamblers and that he actually

Truman, Other Officials Deny Knowledge of Flying Saucers

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Top officials and agencies of the Government—from President Truman on down—joined yesterday in an effort to convince the American public that "flying saucers" do not exist.

A formal statement issued by the Air Force last night was most explicit. It declared flatly that:

1. None of the armed forces is conducting secret experiments with "disc-shaped flying objects which could be a basis for the reported phenomena."

2. There is no evidence that the latter stem from "the activities of any foreign nation."

3. Evaluation of reports of recent "sightings" bears out early conclusions that all can be explained away as "misinterpretation of various conventional objects, a mild form of mass hysteria, or hoaxes."

Earlier, President Truman announced through his press secretary at Key West, Fla., that he knew absolutely nothing of such flying objects being developed by the United States or any other nation.

"We are not denying this because of any development of secret weapons," said Secretary Charles G. Ross, "but purely because we know of nothing to support these rumors."

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson said about the same thing at a news conference. He told reporters he was "satisfied there is nothing in the reports."

Johnson said he had facetiously

Official Testifies

Lee Pictured As Speeding Aid to China

A Commerce Department official flatly denied yesterday that Michael Lee, head of exports to the Far East, delayed shipments of aviation gasoline to Nationalist China for its war with Communists in 1948.

The testimony was given by J. Mishell George, assistant director of the Office of International Trade, to a Senate subcommittee hearing charges against Lee by Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.).

Lee, a naturalized citizen who was born in Manchuria, heads the Far Eastern Division of the Office of International Trade. He is currently undergoing his second loyalty investigation in the Commerce Department.

George said that Lee many times urged faster action on clearing of aviation gasoline for the hard-pressed forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

George testified that when he headed a temporary advisory committee on exports to China last year, Lee made "a real contribution" and presented information which led to approval of more help for Nationalist China.

He said that if there was "any negligence" in what was done by the temporary committee, "it was mine." He said Lee was "an adviser" in that program but did not decide final policy.

Matthew Hale, acting solicitor for the Commerce Department, testified there was some delay on aviation shipments to China in 1948 because the Central Trust Co., of China, wanted a 1 percent fee totaling $37,000 for handling the purchase. He said the demand was dropped after being challenged.

He said that one half of a request for 135,000 gallons of high octane gasoline was approved within 30 days and most of the rest within another month.

South Trimble, jr., head of the Commerce Department's loyalty board, refused to answer any questions about Lee's first loyalty examination or the current investigation. He said he could not discuss it under President Truman's executive orders covering the loyalty program.

By The Associated Press

The CIO and the Progressive Party yesterday said proposed anti-Communist laws are unnecessary and a threat to everybody's rights.

Spokesmen for the two groups testified before the House Un-American Activities Committee, which is considering bills to clamp down on Communists and Communist-front organizations.

Thomas E. Harris, assistant general counsel of the CIO, said the Communists are losing strength in this country and can no longer be regarded as a danger to the Government unless there is war with Russia.

"Hazard" to All Rights

"The situation certainly does not seem to call for new sweeping anti-Communists legislation, which would not only deny civil rights to Communists but would put at hazard the civil rights of everyone else," he said.

Thomas I. Emerson, a Yale law professor speaking for the Progressive Party, said communism has gained no serious foothold among the American people. He added:

"And I refuse to believe that communism would ever come to this country as a result of foreign persuasion alone."

Emerson especially criticized a bill by Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) to require Communist and "front" organizations to register with the Justice Department along with their memberships. The committee also is considering a bill by its chairman, Representative Wood (D., Ga.), to bar Communists from defense jobs as well as with the Government.

Provisions Held Vague

Harris termed the Nixon bill "a serious threat to our most cherished constitutional safeguards," contending:

1. "It imposes penalties upon association and opinion rather than upon overt (unlawful) actions."

2. "The bill is so loosely drawn that it could impose a blackout upon the civil rights of thousands of individuals who would be driven from progressive organizations out of fear that the vague provisions might be made applicable to them."

Emerson said both the Nixon and Wood bills "mark a sharp break with the tradition of freedom of political expression as it has hitherto existed in the United States."

Purge of Anti-Russians Reported by Albania Exiles

Rome, April 4 (AP).—Albanian exiles reported today that Interior Minister Mehmet Shehu whipped out a pistol and killed a fellow Communist at a meeting of the central committee on March 6 for shouting that Russia is guilty of treachery.

The exiles said they received news of a revolt among Albanian Communists from a reliable informant who recently escaped to Greece. They declared Shehu has been waging a purge since the shooting and that four public buildings in Tirana, the capital, have been converted to prisons.

The member shot down in the committee meeting, they said, was Industry Minister Abedin Shehu (no relation to the interior minister), chief of the party's executive committee of Tirana.

According to the exiles a Russian commission headed by an Army Colonel arrived in Tirana in January at the request of the Albanian presidium. The colonel told the Albanian leaders Russia would give them moral and political aid. A Communist member of Parliament objected that Albania also needed financial and military aid as protection against Yugoslavia and Greece. The Russian colonel said this was impossible. Abedin Sheu then shouted that Russia was abandoning Albania and was guilty of treachery.

Premier Enver Hoxha quickly adjourned the session, the story went on. But at the meeting on March 6 the central committee formally accused the Tirana party chief, two cabinet ministers and several other leaders of Trotskyism and intelligence with nationalist organizations.

Abedin Shehu denied the charges and again accused Russia of treachery, whereupon the Interior Minister shot him. Several other alleged ring leaders of the Internal revolt were arrested.

McCarthy Refuses Request Of Loyalty Inquiry for Files which he outlined his "81 cases," McCarthy had offered to give his information to an investigating committee.

The letter noted he said he would be "willing, happy and eager to go before any committee and give the names and all the information available."

McCarthy's refusal to hand over his data will doubtless be exploited to the full by opponents of his free-swinging campaign. For his decision makes him subject to the same accusations of "arrogance" which he himself has leveled against President Truman and the executive branch for refusal to make its loyalty files available to the Senate.

They can also ploint out that it was McCarthy who made the accusations that caused the investigation and who promised to make the information available to help the inquiry.

In the face of McCarthy's refusal, the subcommittee has the power to issue a subpena for his files. But it is very unlikely that it will exercise this power.

Subcommittee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) told reporters yesterday that he would not issue a subpena unless the subcommittee approved such action unanimously. The two Republican members of that group would seem to be adequate insurance against unanimity on this point.

Besides, Senate tradition runs against serving subpenas on its own members.

Even though the subcommittee is now deprived of both McCarthy's basic data and the loyalty files of the FBI and State Department, it can still press on with its investigation.

It should be no great trick for its investigators to determine more or less precisely what information McCarthy has, and to proceed with its own study of the individuals named.

Today, the subcommittee will hold open hearings, beginning at 10:30 a. m., on Government loyalty procedures. First witness will be Gen. Conrad E. Snow, chairman of the State Department loyalty board.

Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the President's Loyalty Revue Board, is also expected to testify.

Lattimore is scheduled to appear in his own defense at 10:30 a. m. Thursday.

indictment last May, has been $5000.

After Federal Judge George B. Harris had finished with the three defendants for the day, he called their two attorneys before him and sentenced both to jail for contempt of court.

Vincent Hallinan, wealthy lawyer with a loud, boisterous courtroom manner, was sentenced to serve six months "in a Federal institution to be designated by the United States Attorney General.

James MacInnis, his associate, got three months on the same terms.

Judge Harris said Hallinan had "deliberately tried to provoke the court into committing error from the beginning of the trial, and to plunge it into a mistrial"; that he had affronted the dignity of the court and his own profession."

Both Free Without Bail

Both attorneys will be permitted freedom without bail, pending commitment, which probably will be delayed as long as they press for appeals of the Bridges case.

The judge thanked the jurors, saying "You have finally found the golden truth shining in the fiery crucibles of this trial."

Bridges' wife was sitting near the defense table. She looked at him, and pursed her lips in the form of a kiss. He smiled.

Bridges said: "My opinion of the Immigration Service still hasn't changed. It was a frameup and still is a frameup."

He was asked, "You still say you're not a Communist?"

Bridges answered, "I still say it was a frameup."

Schmidt's daughter, Louisa, was in tears as she embraced him.

"I think it is an outrage," Hallinan declared. "The dark curtain has fallen again. From now on, the Government will trample on witnesses."

The jury foreman, Glenn Christianson of Oakland, told newsmen: "All I can say is His Honor (Judge Harris) interpreted the law and we as conscientious jurors interpreted the facts.

"The verdict speaks for itself. There need be no more said."

Won't Take Bridges Back, Australian Official Says

Sydney, Australia, April 4 (U.P.).—Australia will not take back Harry Bridges if he is deported by the United States, a highly placed Government official said today.

"He is America's baby, not ours," this official said. "I don't think we want him.

"I know of no international agreement whereby we would be legally obligated to receive a denaturalized American deportee who was born in Australia."

The official said that in the view of the Canberra government Bridges had renounced his Australian birthright when he applied for United States citizenship.

He admitted his government would have to "consider" an appeal to admit Bridges if one should be made by the United States Government.

But, he said, this "would be very embarrassing" to Prime Minister Robert Menzies, who intends shortly to introduce legislation outlawing the Communist Party and barring Communists from trade union offices. This was one of Menzies' campaign planks.

Colorado's Gov. Knous Confirmed as Judge

The Senate yesterday confirmed the appointment of Colorado's Governor, Lee Knous, as Federal district judge for Colorado.

Knous, a Democrat, is serving his second term as Governor. When sworn in as judge, he will be succeeded as Governor by another Democrat, Lieut. Gov. Walter W. Johnson.

Knous will succeed Judge J. Foster Symes, who retired.

FBI 'Pass' Rejected for Science Unit

By The Associated Press

A Senate-House Conference Committee agreed informally yesterday to drop a requirement that the FBI pass on the loyalty of employes of the proposed National Science Foundation.

Senator Thomas (D., Utah) told reporters that the conferees favored instead a provision requiring employes and scholarship winners to take the military oath of allegiance.

The opinion was unanimous, Thomas reported, against putting the FBI in the position of having to pass judgment on proposed employes after investigating their backgrounds.

The Justice Department had contended that this provision of a House bill would convert the FBI from a fact-finding into an evaluation agency, and that such a move is "fraught with peril, not only to the bureau itself, but also to the country."

As Thomas explained the proposed changes, all employes and persons receiving scholarships for work in fields where national security is involved would be investigated by the FBI.

But it would be up to the science foundation itself to decide such persons were good security risks.

Thomas said the Senate-House group will meet again today in an attempt to reach an early agreement on the measure, passed in different form by the two houses.

Jenner Accuses Acheson on German Plants

Senator Jenner (R., Ind.), yesterday accused Secretary of State Acheson of a "pro-Communist betrayal of the American people" in the allied dismantling of German industrial plants.

The Indiana Republican told the Senate that Acheson has led this country "into Communist booby traps all over the world." But he centered his attack on the State Department's policies in Germany.

Jenner said if the American people knew the whole story of what is happening in Germany it "would arouse them to such indignation they would compel Secretary Acheson's resignation tomorrow."

Jenner said the dismantling program is paralyzing any hope of restoring stability to the democratic processes in Germany.

"They are destroying the last hope of winning the enormous potential of German workers to the cause of our competitive enterprise system," he added.

Jenner demanded that the Senate make public confidential testimony given to the Senate Appropriations Committee on March 10 by John J. McCloy, American high commissioner for Germany.

McCloy Calls Unity Of Europe Urgent

London, April 4 (U.P.).—John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner for Germany, called on western Europe tonight to take West Germany into full partnership at once and thus keep Russia from making all Germany a satellite state.

"Tomorrow may be too late," McCloy warned.

There was a tone of distinct urgency in McCloy's speech, made before the Pilgrims of Great Britain, as he asserted that Russia was using Nazi methods to "subjugate Germany into vassalage," aiming first at Berlin.

". . . The Soviets are again using in Germany the very methods the Nazis used such a short time ago—marching youth, mammoth meetings, appeals to militarism and the national front, violent abuse of opponents and constant purges," McCloy said. ". . . They are training a German army in the Eastern Zone under the guise of a police force."

But, McCloy said, the Allies will stay in Berlin and—if they act promptly—will defeat the Russian long-range plot to communize all Germany.

He emphasized that it is necessary at once to create an effective European union in which Germany will play a full part.

McCloy outlined a five-point American policy for Germany including the question of eventual rearmament, the problem of uniting Europe, the rehabilitation of Germany's economy, the organization of Europe to prevent future German aggression and the providing of means by which German youth may hope to create a free society.

He said frankly it might be necessary to approve a German economy "strong enough to be a potential threat to the security of her neighbors." It will be up to Europe, he said, to organize itself so that Germany can not again plunge the continent into war.

McCloy is just back from high-level talks in Washington. It appeared obvious his statements had been approved in advance by President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson because of their vigor, their sweeping range and the tone of authority in which he made them.

57 groups, was passed finally by Congress over Mr. Truman's objections and he promptly announced he had directed Secretary of Defense Johnson to impound the funds provided for all groups above 48.

Finletter, born in Philadelphia November 11, 1893, was a special assistant to the Secretary of State from 1941 to 1944. He was a consultant to the United States delegation to the San Francisco Conference in 1945 which drafted the United Nations Charter. Later, he was chief of the ECA Mission in London. He was a captain in the 312th Field Artillery from 1917 to 1919.

As a lawyer, he is author of such books as "Principles of Corporation Reorganization," "Cases of Corporation Reorganization" and "The Law of Bankruptcy Reorganization."

India-Pakistan Policing Unit May Be Set Up

New Delhi, April 4 (U.P.).—The Premiers of Hindu India and Moslem Pakistan have agreed to set up an "interstate commission" to police communal rioters of the two nations, an informed source said tonight.

There was little official information emanating from the conferences of India's Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Pakistan's Liaquat Ali Khan. But one source said the Premiers had decided on a joint commission to halt the bloody fighting which possibly could erupt into an Asiatic war.

The commission, it was said, would carry out a seven-point program which would commit India and Pakistan to:

1. Full responsibility for providing protection for religious minorities.
2. Punish those guilty of communal crimes.
3. "Help in every way" the victims of communal strife "to secure rehabilitation and compensation."
4. Search intensively for looted property and return it.
5. Free and return abducted women.
6. Not recognize forced religious conversion.
7. Punish those who "spread wild rumors."

The commission would be empowered to "deal" with the failure of either country to carry out its agreements, although it was believed the method of "dealing" would be to make recommendations.

Screen and Radio Stars Help Open District Cancer Drive

The Washington Post

PROGRAM NOTE—Dr. Charles S. Cameron, medical and scientific director of the American Cancer Society, checks the program with singer David Street and Mrs. Street, film actress Mary Beth Hughes, as stars of stage, screen, radio and television launched the 1950 cancer crusade at Constitution Hall last night

The American Cancer Society launched its $200,000 District drive last night amid a galaxy of screen and radio stars in Constitution Hall.

Several thousand campaign workers and guests saw a three-hour variety show, interspersed with talks on the importance of the drive.

Dr. Charles S. Cameron, medical and scientific director of the society, sounded the keynote, saying "Science appears to have a beachhead on cancer's territory."

He said more had been learned about cancer in the past five years than in all the previous years of man's study, but that a permanent cure was "a long-term project, not to be expected soon or suddenly."

An address of welcome was made by Walter S. Pratt, jr., president of the District division. Other speakers were Dr. Royal Garff, of the University of Utah, and Lloyd Carey, father of Spike Carey, the 8-year-old child who died in Children's Hospital on March 16 from cancer.

Danton Walker and Igor Cassini, newspaper columnists, shared master of ceremonies duties with disk Jockey Eddie Gallagher.

Faye Emerson, Martha Scott, and Helmut Dantine provided serious moments with talks on cancer. Lanny Ross, David Street, Mary Beth Hughes, Jeff Clark and Mary Curtis sang, Hal IeRoy danced and Dean Murphy gave his well known imitations. Music was furnished by an AFL orchestra led by Erwin Howard Devron, and the United States Navy School of Music Band under L. L. Gobeille.

Officials Suspect Cominform Holds Budapest Session

Vienna, April 4 (U.P.).—British and Austrian officials today said there was some reason to believe a military meeting of the Cominform was being held in Budapest.

The officials said they had received one report that Cominform officials were discussing closer cooperation between Soviet and satellite armies, such as standardization of arms and measures to intensify pressure on Marshal Tito's Yugoslav government.

14 Charged With Plotting To Kill Nehru

Bombay, India, April 4 (AP).—The Bombay government announced the arrest of 14 persons today and indicated it had smashed a plot to assassinate Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and other prominent Congress Party leaders.

Among those arrested was Vinayak Damodar Savarkar, former president of the Hindu Mahasabha, an extreme religious-political organization which wants to make India an all-Hindu country.

Some Mahasabha leaders are known to be exasperated at Nehru's current negotiations in New Delhi with Premier Liaquat Ali Khan of Pakistan to settle Hindu-Mosleum disorders.

Savarkar was tried and acquitted on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi in January, 1948.

Many of those arrested were detained in the investigation of the Gandhi assassination, which was plotted in Poona and Bombay. N. V. Godse, a Poona newspaper editor, and N. B. Apte were hanged last November for the killing of Gandhi.

In recent weeks some extremists have been talking of war and threatening to liquidate East Paistan as a result of bloody riots and on both sides of the border in East and West Bengal.

Saucers 'News' To Officials

raised the question at yesterday's meeting of the Armed Forces Policy Council, which includes the departmental secretaries and Joint Chiefs of Staff. Navy Secretary Francis Matthews and Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, as well as other officials, assured him the denials were sincere and truthful.

The latest flareup of public interest in the saucers resulted from statements by Radio Commentator Henry J. Taylor and the weekly news magazine United States News and World Report that the saucers do exist and are revolutionary American aircraft probably developed by the Navy. A Navy spokesman flatly denied this Monday.

Johnson said he is convinced the saucers could not be experiments conducted by any other Government agency outside his department because the Pentagon's Research and Development Board coordinates all such activity.

Despite the denials, new reports of "saucers" continued. At Tipp City, Ohio, nine persons said they saw saucers over the Air Force base at Wright Field, early Sunday. Jerry Robinson, a 22-year-old Marine veteran, speaking for the group, said they saw "two bright lights in the sky" which later were discerned as brilliant discs trailing a small streak of orange flame.

After hovering for a time, they shot straight up in the air and disappeared, he said.

Police Chief J. C. Lee of Elizabeth City, Ill., reported that "a weird red and blue disc-like object" whizzed over the town early Sunday, "traveling at a high rate of speed."

Allies Set Up General Staff In West Berlin

Berlin, April 4 (AP).—The Western powers in Berlin have organized an Allied general staff to spring into action in any emergency, it was disclosed today by Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, United States comandant in the divided city.

There is no overall commander but the post is reserved for such appointment in the event of genuine aggression.

Taylor said the staff's primary task is to plan the suppression of any "putsch" tactics that might be forthcoming from the East. The staff came into being after the Communists threatened to use a youth march of a half million east Germans to storm the city May 27-30, and spread disorder and fear. Since then the Communists have taken a milder tone in their plans for the end of next month.

Soviet Zone Purging Opposition Leaders

Berlin, April 4 (U.P.).—Russian and Communist secret police are carrying out mass arrests of opposing political leaders in the Soviet zone of Germany, informants from the East reported today.

The arrests were believed to be part of a campaign to eliminate all opposition to the Communist party before the October 15 elections in eastern Germany.

A "purge" of opposition leaders has been under way for months and many have fled to the West. The latest incidents point to an intensification of the purge.

Those seized by police include an increasing number of members of the Christian Democratic Party, the reports said. Mass persecution of other non-Communist politicians was reported from all five states of the East German government.

Among the prominent persons reported seized are a Dr. Koehler, deputy mayor of Potsdam, and his wife. Potsdam is Russian headquarters for Germany.

statement, and said Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's "working papers" will show this. Assistant Secretary W. S. McNeil, the department's comptroller, also said "no basis for it."

Eisenhower worked on the defense budget for many months last year, and it was some recent testimony of his that has led to the demands for upping military spending.

Ike told Senators the '51 budget was "generally in line" but that he would favor an increase of not more than 500 million dollars to (1) strengthen Alaskan bases; (2) step up plane procurement; (3) provide additional anti-submarine forces; (4) modernize Army weapons; (5) strengthen intelligence; (6) do more about industrial mobilization. He told reporters, however, that he had no disagreement with the Administration in the matter.

Johnson said yesterday he had talked to Eisenhower and there is "no basic disagreement" between them. He said he thinks most if not all of the things desired by the general can be accomplished within the 13-billion-dollar budget.

Funds for housing additional troops in Alaska and building a radar screen there are in the budget but have not yet been sent to Congress because the authorization bill is still pending, said the Secretary. The total of 135 millions is all the Joint Chiefs feel can be profitably spent there next year, he added.

All of the other Eisenhower suggestions can be handled by adjustments within the budget, Johnson said. Plane procurement, however, is being restudied to see whether the present level is sufficient.

"I want to keep the 48 Air Force groups, and naval aviation, too, thoroughly up-to-date," he declared. The Secretary added that he and President Truman believed the two billions proposed in the budget would do just that.

Eisenhower, before a Senate group and Air Force and Navy, witnesses during the House Appropriations Committee hearings testified this was not so. They said the replacements to be ordered are not sufficient to keep current operating forces equipped with up-to-date aircraft.

Johnson gave a hint as to the differences by saying he opposed an existing "rigid formula" which classifies a 3-year-old fighter and a 5-year-old bomber as obsolete.

Representatives W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) and James Van Zandt (R., Pa.) joined Vinson in the attack on Johnson and the adequacy of the defense budget.

Mahon, chairman of the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee, said, however, that there is no need to store up "a lot of hardware" that will become obsolete.

"Our enemies want us to spend ourselves into defeat," he declared.

A House vote on the proposed defense increases will not come until after the Easter recess. Johnson said he'd have a JCS finding on the adequacy of the proposed plane fund ready

Red Cross Drive Total at $956,483, 92 Pct. of Quota

The District Red Cross drive yesterday had netted $956,483, or 92.05 percent of its $1,039,000 quota for 1950, according to General Chairman Daniel W. Bell.

This increase represents a 2 percent jump over the day before. Below-quota divisions are Government, with 92.8 percent, and general business, with 88.7 percent. Chairman Bell also announced that booths and diplomatic group had exceeded its quota by 15 percent by raising $8066.

Britain Improves Its Dollar Situation

London, April 4 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps reported to Commons today that Britain and her sterling area partners earned 40 million dollars more than they spent in the first three months of 1950.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said the figures showed a "further advance in our long and arduous campaign to close the dollar gap."

It was the most favorable economic report he has been able to give since the war.

In addition to the bloc's 40-million-dollar favorable balance in its trade with the dollar area during the quarter, Britain drew 229 million dollars from America's European Recovery funds and 27 million dollars from a Canadian loan.

As a result the sterling area's gold-dollar reserves shot up from a dangerous low of $1,688,000,000 to $1,984,000,000—within 16 million dollars of the two billion dollars which Sir Stafford has described as the minimum for safety. The reserve represents the sterling area's entire working capital for trade with dollar nations. Britain is the banker for the area, which includes Commonwealth countries and some other nations.

Actual dollar earnings from trade compared with a 30-million-dollar deficit in the last quarter of 1949, a deficit of 539 million dollars in the third quarter of last year and a deficit of 330 million dollars for January, February and March a year ago.

Cripps attributed the better showing to three main factors:

1. Devaluation of the pound from $4.03 to $2.80 last September. This cut export prices and stimulated sales abroad.

2. The 25 percent cut in purchases from dollar countries, which the whole sterling area agreed upon last fall.

3. A seasonal boom in dollar sales of some commodities such as cocoa.

Warning against complacency, Cripps said some beneficial results from devaluation would be only temporary. Recent seasonal factors may be offset by coresponding seasonal declines in months immediately ahead, he added.

Also, he declared, Britain cannot be certain that the present level of demand for exports to dollar areas, and present prices, will be maintained.

Therefore, he said, "We must maintain a rigorous economy in dollar expenditure and encourage recovery throughout the sterling area."

PACT—Fro mPage 1

Acheson Seeks Unity in Pact

mon diplomacy as well. The process has already gone far among the United States, Britain and France, but not far enough, in the State Department's opinion.

The secretary gave a guarded hint of his intentions yesterday in a statement marking the first anniversary of signing of the treaty. The signing ceremony took place here in the Departmental Auditorium just a year ago.

Contending that "much progress" had been made in a year in setting up the pact organization and in planning "for the common defense," the Secretary said:

"A spirit of real cooperation has manifested itself and common defense plans are becoming a reality.

"But the treaty nations must work toward even closer association in the North Atlantic community in order to help maintain international security and achieve a higher state of well-being.

"We must develop the treaty to its full effectiveness as a positive influence for peace."

The words "a higher state of well-being" recalled the treaty preamble, which said the signers sought "to promote stability and well-being in the North Atlantic area," and also Article 2, which pledged the parties to promote "conditions of stability and well-being."

But another of the pledges in Article 2—namely, "to eliminate conflict in their international economic policies"—probably will be sidestepped at the coming London meeting.

Economic Problems too Prickly

The American view is that economic problems among the treaty partners are too prickly for the Pact organization to touch at the present time. Immediate problems will be handled in other ways; the European payments difficulty will continue to be dealt with by the Marshall Plan organization, and the British-American oil difficulties by bilateral negotiations.

In the economic field the most that the Atlantic Council may do at its next meeting is to work out a system of consultation for studying the economic problems after 1952, when the Marshal Plan is due to end.

At present American policymakers remember that the council does not include Sweden, Switzerland, Ireland or western Germany, and therefore they think it is a defective mechanism for economic affairs.

The Secretary's statement yesterday, broadcast by the "Voice of America," recalled the purposes of the treaty and "the responsibilities which rest on the United States as a member of the international community."

Stop War Before Start

"The treaty seeks to prevent war by stopping it before it starts," it said, "by making clear to any potential aggressor that war would not pay, and that the North Atlantic nations will not be divided and then swallowed piecemeal.

"This treaty is not directed solely against aggression. If any nation alleges that the treaty is directed against it, then we must conclude that that nation harbors aggressive designs—for the treaty provides for no military action except in the case of an attack against one of its members."

The Secretary recalled American help in providing arms under the Mutual Defense Assistance Act, and called this "a first step" in carrying out the concept of common defense embodied in the treaty.

"It is anticipated," he said, "that shortly the Congress will be asked for additional authorization to extend further military assistance.

"We must realize that our European friends in the treaty are similarly contributing to the common defense. They have made encouraging progress toward economic recovery, but they still have a difficult task ahead and can build defensive strength only as fast as their economic and financial condition will allow. They must have our continued help."

For Their Unity

ECA Nations Are Praised By Harriman

Paris, April 4 (NYHT).—W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador for the Economic Cooperation Administration, gave high praise to the Marshall Plan countries today for their efforts through the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, which he called "the most effective international organization ever put together."

The setting for his statement was a meeting of the OEEC Council, at which ministers of the 18 member countries decided on structural changes that should increase the political weight of the OEEC as a force for unity among the western Europeans.

At the same time, the council elected Germany to the first executive positions held by the Germans in an international body since the war, and named Dr. Dirk U. Stikker, Netherlands Foreign Minister and OEEC political conciliator, as council chairman for the year beginning April 16.

Harriman said the American people feel "good use has been made of Marshall Plan funds through the OEEC." At the same time, he outlined a series of objectives toward which the United States thinks OEEC members could make progress through mutual aid in the next two years.

He listed these as high and stable employment, the development of markets for Europe's increasing production, development of new sources of supply, encouragement of international investment, improvement of overseas territories and the problem of over-population and large-scale emigration.

In a move to streamline the OEEC and increase its political effectiveness, the ministers decided to cut out the consultative group, which has acted as a steering committee and the council itself by more frequent meetings of the ministers.

Help for Peron by Indirect U. S. Loans Is Being Studied

four-month visit here last fall by an Argentine mission to study economic problems between the two countries; (2) the recent visit to Buenos Aires by Edward G. Miller, jr., Assistant Secretary of State in charge of inter-American affairs, and (3) the present visit of Cereijo, ostensibly to attend the meeting of the Inter-American Economic and Social Council.

From all these discussions State Department officials concluded, skeptically at first but confidently later, that Peron really wanted and needed an improvement in his relations with the United States.

Treatment of U. S. Business

One of the obstacles up to now has been the harsh and discriminatory treatment of American business firms in Argentina. Cereijo has worked hard during his ten days in Washington to repair some of the damage.

His government has finally allowed Braniff Airways to fly into Buenos Aires instead of being compelled to use Asuncion, Paraguay, as its terminus. It has made an agreement with Panagra Airways enabling that American-owned company to get its proceeds out of Argentina.

It has offered American motion picture companies a five-year contract after virtually barring them from the country. It has made an arrangement with the meat-packing firm of Swift International so that 22,000 stockholders in this country can get money that Peron long denied them.

Cereijo has not only approved the start of negotiations for an investment treaty, resembling the "model treaty" with Uruguay, but has also agreed to negotiate a treaty to get rid of double taxation of Argentine and American citizens.

May Ratify Rio Treaty

At this rate it would not be surprising to see the Peron government ratify the Rio Treaty of inter-American defense before this year is over.

Yet even the most sanguine officials concede that the Peron government still denies civil liberties, still throttles political opposition, still hampers and even persecutes the organs of independent opinion. When a plane-load of Argentine newspapermen flew here last week for the Inter-American Economic and Social Council meetings, there were no representatives of La Prensa or La Nacion among them.

The State Department is disposed to help Peron in spite of these conditions; it believes the gains for American policy would far outweigh the disadvantages. It remains to be seen whether the Administration as a whole will come to the same conclusion.

Committee Votes For Labor Dept. Reorganizing Plan

By The Associated Press

The House Committee on Expenditures in executive departments yesterday approved President Truman's plan for reorganization of the Labor Department.

Unless disapproved by either the House or the Senate, the plan, like others submitted by Mr. Truman, will go into effect automatically.

The plan transfers to the Secretary of Labor all functions now vested in other officers and agencies within the department. Chief of these is the administration of the Wage and Hour Division.

International Status Voted For Jerusalem

Geneva, April 4 (AP).—The United Nations trusteeship council formally approved today a statute for internationalizing Jerusalem with only a vague provision for its enforcement.

The United States and Britain abstained from the final vote on the charter which would place Jerusalem and surrounding villages, a total area of about 100 square miles, under United Nations rule.

The United States joined, however, in a resolution which directed council President Roger Garreau of France to seek the full cooperation of Israel and Hashemite Jordan in implementing the statute. This is the only provision for carrying out the statute. Britain abstained.

Israel and Jordan, who now occupy the divided city, have rejected internationalization. Jordan's representative was not present today. Aubrey S. Eban, Israel's representative, immediately declared his country could not dissasociate itself from responsibility for the city.

He told the council that 104,000 inhabitants of the city are citizens of Israel, and that Israel sustains the city's present social and economic life as well as its "venerable historic traditions."

U. S. Is Making U. N. Impotent, Pravda Avers

Moscow, April 4 (U.P.).—The Communist newspaper Pravda charged today that the United States' "total diplomacy obstructionism" had reduced the United Nations to a state of complete impotence and paralysis.

The official newspaper Izvestia stated at the same time recent developments in Norway meant that country was playing a dangerous game with the enemies of peace.

Pravda cited United States insistence on retaining Chiang Kai-shek's representative on the Security Council and influencing American dependents like Ecuador, France and Egypt against recognizing the Peking delegation so as to end the deadlock.

Pravda rejected Secretary of State Dean Acheson's charges of Soviet obstructionism, saying the Americans themselves are the "grave-diggers of the United Nations."

It said the proceedings of the Social and Economic Council follow a pattern set by the Wall Street American bosses of not permitting any real discussion and debate.

Izvestia listed two recent developments as pointing up the dangerous game Norway was playing—the recent visit of British Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery and two speeches by Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange.

Izvestia said Montgomery made an inspection tour of Norway's war potential and degree of the country's militarization and then made two remarkable declarations. The first, Izvestia said, was that the Norse army accept his command and "become cannon fodder for Anglo-American imperialists." The second was to issue directives to the Norwegian ruling circles to stabilize the country economically and step up preparation for war.

Izvestia call Lange one of the most active champions of Anglo-American plans in Scandinavia

to forego parties

London, April 4 (AP).—Sharman Douglas, one of the brighter lights of London society, said today she is cutting down her social activities to become a volunteer nurse's aide in a children's hospital.

"Good for you," was the comment of her father, United States Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas.

The blonde Sharman defined her hospital duties as "a chief bottle-washer." She said she would do things like taking temperatures, and would not be paid for her work.

Sharman was the luncheon guest today of Peter Lawford, British-born Hollywood actor.

Lawford, who reached London today from the United States, told reporters he wasn't engaged to Miss Douglas, wasn't thinking of proposing to anyone at the moment, and that he expected to visit the Douglases while in England.

Then he scooted off to the Douglas residence.

Graduate Schools' Segregation at Issue

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Segregation in the State-supported graduate schools of Oklahoma and Texas was attacked and defended yesterday before the Supreme Court.

Like the railroad dining car case argued on Monday, the two school cases offer the high court a chance to strike down the 54-year-old doctrine that "separate-but-equal" facilities for the white and Negro races does not violate the Constitution.

Again yesterday it was far from clear that the court would tackle that doctrine, but there were indications that the court could, if it wished, sweep aside racial segregation in the top rung of the State educational ladder without affecting either the public grade and high schools or even the undergraduate State universities.

The difficulty in doing this was indicated by Justice Jackson's remark at one point that the Constitution doesn't make distinctions between grades in schools.

Oklahoma's Assistant Attorney General Fred H. Hansen declared that his State, because it did not have the money to set up a duplicate graduate school for Negroes, had resorted to a "legal fiction" of segregation to observe the State constitution's requirement of "insurmountable barriers" between the races.

The 24 Negro students now attend the same classes as whites but sit in the left-hand rows of each classroom. At one time they sat outside the door, as when the Oklahoma case was first brought by G. W. McLaurin.

Justice Jackson called this a "petty" difference and Justice Minton remarked that there didn't seem to be "much point" to such segregation. At this, Hansen replied:

"Perhaps not in the graduate school, but if 'separate but equal' is swept aside, all Negro schools and the Negro university in Oklahoma would fall."

For McLaurin, attorney Robert L. Carter argued that regardless of the extent of the university's segregation rules, any segregation is unconstitutional under the Fourteenth Amendment's declaration that the "equal protection of the laws" shall not be denied by a State to any person. Amos T. Hall, also for McLaurin, declared segregation is designed to "symbolize" the Negro as "of an inferior cast."

The Texas case concerns the efforts of Heman Marion Sweatt to enter the University of Texas law school. The State has opened a State law school for Negroes and it presented photos of its new building for the court's inspection.

Texas' Attorney General Price Daniel said the segregation principle—the State's right to continue separate schools as long as the "advantages and privileges" are equal—is not limited to graduate schools. He said "the only way" Texas will have public facilities is on a segregated basis.

On Sweatt's behalf, Thurgood Marshall declared that "we've been 30 years trying to get this issue (the legality of segregation) before this court."

But, he added, this case involves only the question of the State's law school. He said statements in Texas' brief about the effect on other schools of an end to law school segregation "have no business in this case."

No decision is expected on the explosive issue of the court's 1949-50 term, for many weeks.

Housing Bill Conferees Speed Agreement Before Recess

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

House-Senate conferees on the compromise housing measure drove toward agreement last night in the hope of securing House action before the Easter recess.

The House conferees tentatively agreed to an extra 250 million for the Federal National Mortgage Association, provided that 25 million was earmarked for site loans for prefabricated housing. This agreement is subject to parliamentary ruling since such a provision was in neither House nor Senate bills.

Under Title I—for repair and modernization—conferees agreed to an additional 250 million authority for insurance for five years. This was a compromise between the Senate bill giving Title I authority for two years and the House which made it permanent.

Under Title II, covering mortgage insurance authorization, the conferees agreed on two billion 250 million in loans. The House had voted two billion 750 million and the Senate one billion 750 million. The House agreed to 150 million in direct loans to veterans.

The conferees also tentatively agreed upon 300 million in loans to colleges.

The conferees also agreed on these provisions:

1. 250 million dollars for FHA mortgage insurance for low-cost houses for sale in so-called distant suburban areas.

The program was extended for five years. The Senate wanted to extend it for only two years, while the House wanted to make it permanent.

2. 500 million dollars for FHA insurance on loans for apartment dwellings. The Senate had authorized 400 million dollars and the House 600 million dollars.

The money will be used to cover applications received up to last March 1. The Senate had placed the cut-off date at February 1.

Truman Nullifies T-H Act, Taft Charges

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday charged that President Truman, the Justice Department and the National Labor Relations Board have been carrying out a "general plan" to nullify the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act.

The coauthor of the law maintained that President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 12—which would abolish the independent office of counsel to the NLRB and transfer his powers to the board and its chairman—is another instance of the "general plan."

Taft, testifying before the Senate Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments on his own resolution calling for rejection of the reorganization plan, said that the President had shown reluctance to enforce the Taft-Hartley Act ever since the 1948 elections campaign in which Mr. Truman urged its repeal. Specifically, the Republican Senate leader mentioned the President's "reluctance" to invoke the law's injunction provisions in the recent coal strike.

The Ohioan also accused President Truman of loading the five-member NLRB with individuals held in favor by organized labor.

As a result of the President's attitude and "general plan," Taft said, the Justice Department has made little or no attempt to enforce the Taft-Hartley Act in union violations of provisions dealing with welfare funds, checkoff of union assessments and anti-Communist affidavits. He asserted the Justice Department has failed to take any perjury charge actions against 23 union officers suspected of taking a false non-Communist oath.

As for the NLRB panel, according to Taft, it has "no sympathy" for the Taft-Hartley Act.

The committee is expected to support the Taft resolution and turn down Reorganization Plan No. 12. However, the plan goes into automatic effect on May 12 unless rejected by a constitutional majority of either chamber—49 in the Senate, 218 in the House.

Capitol Hill opponents of Reorganization Plan No. 12 presently doubt that, with scores of legislators home campaigning for the primaries, they can get the necessary constitutional majority for rejection.

Taft opposed the reorganization plan on three counts. He argued it was not in accord with the reorganization recommendations of the Hoover Commission; it would be "unsound" so far as the operations of the NLBR are concerned, and it was an attempt to use the Hoover Report for political purposes.

He said the President's plan would end the present separation of prosecuting powers—in the hands of the general counsel—and judicial powers—held by the NLRB panel, and therefore by indirection undo a provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

5 Sentenced With Wagstaff In Jailbreak

Sentences were imposed yesterday on six youths who either plotted to or actually did engineer an escape from the Montgomery County Jail at Rockville, Md.

One of the six was Joseph A. Wagstaff, 24-year-old Chevy Chase "bad boy," who is now serving a two-year term in the Maryland House of Corrections for trying to stab a maid with a paring knife in his family's home.

Circuit Court Judge Charles W. Woodward gave Wagstaff a 12-month sentence for conspiring to escape, but provided that it run concurrently with his present term.

Alfred S. DeAgro, jr., 18, of 8105 University la., Silver Spring, Md., and Leonard W. Lewis, 21, of 4623 Asbury pl. nw., who tried to spring Wagstaff from the Rockville jail last November 29, were ordered confined to the State Reformatory for Males for an indeterminate period not to exceed 12 months.

DeAgro pleaded guilty to the charge of conspiracy to effect a jail break. Wagstaff and Lewis pleaded not guilty but were speedily convicted by a jury.

Judge Woodward also sentenced three youths who pleaded guilty to escaping from the jail last January 30. They were John E. Coffin, 23, and Robert L. Caldwell, 20, both of Carderock, Md., and Walter F. Williams, 18, of 1116 F st. ne.

Williams was given six months to run concurrently with the three years he is now serving in the House of Corrections for housebreaking.

Caldwell, still awaiting trial on two counts of housebreaking and larceny, was given an indeterminate sentence not to exceed six months in the Reformatory

Coffin received what amounted to 30 months in the House of Corrections

Death of Robertson, Newsman, In Maryland Ruled Suicide

Nathan Wood Robertson, Washington newspaper man and Heywood Broun prize winner, was found dead early yesterday in the garage at his home, 116 Shepherd st., Chevy Chase, Md. He was 4[illegible]

His wife, Elizabeth, found h[illegible] slumped in the rear seat of the Robertson car. He had left the house about 1 a. m., when everyone was asleep, she said.

Police said the motor was still running, the garage was filled with carbon monoxide and a hose had been attached to the exhaust pipe and run into the interior of the car.

Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide late yesterday.

Mr. Robertson had been seriously ill wth diabetes for many years, and on several occasions during his versatile newspaper career was forced to give up working. Friends explained he long has been despondent about his health because his illness has never responded properly to insulin treatments.

Mr. Roberston was one of the Nation's most crusading liberal journalists. He had strong, outspoken feelings about the issues of the day and constantly worried about trends in domestic and world affairs.

A native Washingtonian, he was one of the original members of the Washington Bureau of the Newspaper PM, a charter member of the Washington Newspaper Guild and a former vice president of the American Newspaper Guild.

His last assignment was writing a Washington column for Labor Press Associates, a labor news agency.

A longtime press association reporter, Nate Robertson was remembered by his former associates yesterday as one of the fastest, most articulate wire service writers in the trade.

The climax of Nate's newspaper career came in 1944 when he won the Heywood Broun Memorial Award for a series of stories concerning "the fire insurance lobby, the Wright Aeronautical inspection scandal and the Elk Hills-Standard Oil deal," the prize citation noted.

His father, Thomas E. Robertson, was former United States Commissioner of Patents in the Coolidge Administration.

Besides his parents and his wife, Mr. Robertson leaves a son, Donald, 18, and a daughter, Judith, 16.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Thursday at All Saints Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase, Md. Burial services will be private.

Judge Clears Court, Studies Rape Charge

A rape charge against Leslie T. Freeman, Alexandria warehouse worker, was taken under advisement by Judge William P. Woolls yesterday after an all-day hearing behind closed doors in Alexandria Corporation Court.

Freeman, 49, is accused of attacking a 34-year-old widow and mother of two children, who charged she was raped in the warehouse last October 13 when she went there to reclaim some papers stored in furniture belonging to her late husband.

At the start of the trial, Judge Woolls excluded all spectators, including the press, on motion of Commonwealth's Attorney Howard W. Smith, jr. The motion brought no objection from Defense Attorney Walter I. Young.

During the trial, the complainant said she was raped when she went to the warehouse just a week after her husband's death. Freeman, who denied the charge, said he had assisted the woman to her home because she had been drinking.

'Non-Virgin Club' Just Imagination, Grand Jury Says

Borger, Tex., April 4 (AP).—The Hutchinson County grand jury said today there is no such thing as a "non-Virgin" club among teenagers of this city and county.

The grand jury began an investigation last week after newspaper stories said there was evidence such a club existed and that it was believed to require its members to have sexual intercourse at least once a week.

Watchmaker's Body Is Found In Anacostia

Body of a man tentatively identified as that of a Washington watchmaker was found in the Anacostia River at 2:30 p. m. yesterday.

Finley

From papers on the body, police identified the man as Wayne P. Finley, 39, 2223 Prout st. se., employed at Harvey's Jewelers, 908 F st. nw. Homicide squad detectives are investigating.

The company said such a man was employed there, but had not been at work since Saturday.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Finley, with whom he lived, said they saw him last at 10 a. m. Monday.

They told a reporter they overheard Finley talking on the phone about meeting "some fellows who had a boat."

Their son did not come home Monday night, but they were not concerned, the Finleys said, since he had stayed with friends Sunday night.

His body was found floating about 12 feet from the Anacostia's north shore near 17th and M sts. se. by Lieut. Maurice Harbin and a crew of three men from No. 18 Engine Company.

Harbin said no marks of violence were apparent. The body was recovered by harbor police.

The No. 18 fire crew was fighting a blaze aboard a cabin cruiser when Harbin noticed the body.

What Makes a GOOD EGG?

GIANT knows that the most important points about an egg are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms, thus making it possible for us to bring you eggs of "top" quality in their freshest condition.

An egg's quality is related to the breeding, care, and scientific feeding of the chickens. That's why GIANT gets its eggs from farmers who are exclusively egg producers and whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. There's a great difference between eggs produced by chickens which roam the farm picking up "scratch" here and there—and eggs produced by chickens fed with scientific mash (grain and bran) and other fattening foods including a daily ration of buttermilk and even cod liver oil. It's eggs of this latter kind of chickens which GIANT features in every one of its 20 stores.

Sheriff Guilty In Tax Case

did not know the real source of the payments, Ramsey stated.

Judge Chesnut granted the request of the defense for postponement of sentence for one week pending a presentence investigation tion by the probation department. Meanwhile, Sheriff was free under bail.

The office of United States Attorney George Morris Fay in Washington for two years had been engaged in a campaign against gambling activities in the District, Prince Georges County and other suburban areas.

At one point Fay's men crossed the District of Columbia line into Maryland, arresting residents of the county on gaming charges. It was understood that the income tax charges were prepared from leads provided by Fay.

Sheriff's admissions reported to the court today were the first time any indication of collusion by law enforcement officers has gotten into the legal record. There have been many hints and unofficial charges that the county condoned bookmaking and numbers racket activities, with some officials receiving payoffs.

Defendant Is Silent

Sheriff, whose home is in Landover, Md., appeared in the courtroom nattily dressed in a light blue suit, a darker blue tie and brown shoes. He made no comments during the brief proceedings. Robert W. McCullough, Prince Georges attorney, did all of the speaking for the defense.

The defendant had pleaded innocent to the tax-evasion charge at his arraignment last month, but changed the plea today.

He faces a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 on each of the four counts of the indictment.

In outlining the Government's case against the former sheriff, Ramsey asserted that during the four years, the defendant reported net earnings of $8463 when he actually had net income amounting to $44,962. As sheriff of the county, Sheriff received an annual salary of $2328.

When agents first approached Sheriff for questioning about possible tax liabilities, Sheriff denied the existence of a safe deposit box in which a large quantity of cash reportedly had been deposited, Ramsey said, but when the agents disclosed to Sheriff information which they had, he admitted that he was using such a receptacle in the First National Bank of Southern Maryland, at Upper Marlboro.

$19,000 in Box

The box was found to contain over $19,000 in cash, the court was told. Subsequent investigations disclosed that originally Sheriff had deposited about $22,000 in the box and that he admitted the entire amount had been received from gamblers.

Approximately one-fourth of the total amount in the box had been received in each of the four years the defendant served as sheriff, Ramsey told the court.

"Sheriff admitted the money had been paid to him as gratuities given him by certain elements in the county for alleged protection," Mr. Ramsey asserted.

"The defendant was very candid with the agents during the investigation and admitted he received this money while serving as sheriff for the county," the prosecutor continued.

No Specific Names

"He told the agents it was protection money from gambling elements that did not want their enterprises closed down. The Government is unable to give the names of any particular bookies or numbers writers because Sheriff said the money was turned over in cash envelopes by runners.

"Sheriff said he did not personally know who the men actually were behind the delivery of the money. He said it was usually paid to him in taverns, or brought to him personally by runners."

Judge Chesnut at that point questioned whether as sheriff the defendant actually could offer protection to the gamblers. Ramsey replied that the accused had certain police powers concurrent with that of the Prince Georges County Police Department.

"We have the defendant's statement," Ramsey said, "that he would not have them arrested or prosecuted if they would pay him money."

When McCullough repeatedly referred to the payments from gamblers as "gratuities," Judge Chesnut pointed out that if the payments actually were gratuities, or gifts, they were not subject to taxation.

"If they were really gratuities, McCullough," the judge said, I wonder if they were really taxable?"

"Do you mean," the judge went on, "that he thought they were something like Christmas presents?"

"I just want to call your attention to the fact that under the law, if they were really gifts, they were not taxable at all," Judge Chesnut concluded.

"Your honor," McCullough replied, "I think the people who sent money thought they were getting protection, which the sheriff actually couldn't give them. I don't know whether he considered them Christmas or Easter presents, but I believe that if thought the gambler believed it was for protection, he could not fairly claim it as a gift."

McCullough said he did not think that Sheriff realy wanted to defraud the Government of taxes, but "was afraid to report" the income from the gamblers.

The defendant is the father of two children, a son in the early 30s and a daughter in the early 20s. Sentence will be imposed next Tuesday.

"excellent starts toward getting at two of the problems in the fight against organized crime."

He told newsmen however that his resolution was aimed at the whole field of organized rackets, ranging from gambling to narcotics, use of the mails to defraud and deficiencies in the Mann Act, Dyer Act and fugitive felon law.

"We have to get the whole picture before we consider the legislative aspects."

Johnson's resolution for a separate inquiry by his committee was almost as broad as Kefauver's own but the Coloradan told newsmen he intended to confine it pretty much to the two bills submitted by McGrath.

He asked for $50,000 from the Senate contingent fund to conduct the inquiry—the same amount the Rules Committee voted Kefauver's Judiciary group.

Johnson said he was not trying in any way to sidetrack the Kefauver investigation but felt the committee to which the legislation was referred should take its own look at the problem. He said he was particularly concerned with McGrath's "drastic" bill banning interstate transmission of gambling information except by authorized wire services.

"That gets into a ticklish matter—the borderline between news and gambling," he said. "It gets mighty close to the freedom of information guaranteed by the Constitution. Some of that information, no doubt, can be used for gambling. But a great many people are interested in it as news, and not for betting."

If the Rules Committee grants him $50,000 for an inquiry, Johnson said he plans to call the Attorney General, members of the Federal Communications Commission and other interested Government officials. Then he said he plans to call representatives of the newspaper, radio and television industries for committee questioning.

"We may look at some of these gambling syndicates, too," he added.

The Coloradan said he didn't plan extensive hearings on the bill banning interstate shipment of slot machines and other gambling devices.

"Every Senator knows pretty much how he would vote on a bill like that, without questioning witnesses," he said.

Kefauver's resolution for a sweeping investigation into the whole field of organized crime was introduced January 5, cleared by the Judiciary Committee February 27, and approved by the Rules group March 23. The Rules Committee stipulated, however, that the inquiry be concluded by July 31.

For the past two weeks he has been trying to get it to a Senate vote. Yesterday Kefauver asked Majority Leader Lucas to help him set aside a few minutes of the Senate's time to get it passed.

Soldiers' Home to Be Cut Up For Hospital, Medical Center

center, had been "keep informed" on the deliberations. General Fleming could not be reached for confirmation.

'Not Notified'

A. Murray Preston, secretary of the board of the Medical Center Corp., however, said the board had never been notified "officially" of the plans. He said he had heard "some unofficial talk" about it but never any official confirmation that such a move was under consideration.

The corporation board, Preston said, will meet this afternoon to discuss the plans.

Veterans Administration officials said that under the plans the Nevius tract in Arlington, Va., purchased by VA for its proposed veterans' hospital, will be declared surplus to GSA for further disposition.

Use of the Nevius tract as an addition to nearby Arlington National Cemetery in event it is not used for the purpose of its purchase has been frequently proposed. However, Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) has introduced a bill in Congress which would require the Government to sell it to private ownership, putting it back on Arlington tax books, if the veterans' hospital was not built there.

Already Authorized

Congressional authorization for the establishment of a Washington Medical Center has already provided $2,200,000 for planning funds, and contract authorizations up to $19,500,000. Such planning, however, has been stymied for want of a site.

The center backers, last August, said they were basing all their plans on eventual acquistion of the Naval Observatory grounds, at 34th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw. These plans, however, were recently scrambled when a congressional appropriations subcommittee disallowed the Navy's request for $8,500,000 to relocate its observatory facilities at a site near Charlottesville, Va.

Called "Big Steal"

Bitterly labeling it "the biggest steal in the history of Washington," the men at the home promised to use every weapon available to fight the proposed partitioning of the home's land.

Sergt. Jason Chambers, leader of the group opposing the partition, said he would journey to Capitol Hill today to get Congressional support for the old soldiers.

He also promised to seek a court injunction stopping any partitioning.

The approximately 1550 men have voted 99.3 percent against partition, Chambers said.

"I say 'Stop thief!'" Chambers cried. "What right do they have to steal the Soldiers Home? Who are the people who are giving away what has belonged to the old soldiers of America for 100 years.

Heatedly Chambers averred that he did not believe anyone except Congress had the legal right to "give the Home away."

Furthermore, he said the move was short-sighted because "we've developed a lot in the last 100 years and no one knows how much we'll develop in the next hundred, so that we need the land."

Soldiers' Home, established more than 100 years ago as a refuge for veteran enlisted men of the Regular Army, has been consistently maintained since by small deductions from the enlisted man's monthly pay. Its land was purchased initially by indemnity funds collected from Mexico.

Grusd to Address Lodge

Edward E. Grusd, editor of the National Jewish Monthly, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Argo Lodge at 8:30 p. m. today at the Jewish Community Center.

6693 Mothers Survive Births At Gallinger

Gallinger Hospital obstetrical service here has established a record of bringing 6693 mothers through childbirth without a single maternal death, it was announced yesterday.

Hospital officials said that a recent study published last year showed that only three hospitals in this country have reported more than 5000 consecutive deliveries without maternal death.

Moreover, they said, these three hospitals are private institutions which do not encounter the high proportion of risks found among patients of tax-operated institutions, such as Gallinger Hospital.

At a press conference, Dr. Robert H. Barter, chief medical officer for the Gallinger department, explained that the cases involved only those women past the 28th week of pregnancy. Thus, two deaths last year attributed to abortion and to delayed treatment for a pregnancy outside the womb, were not included.

The record was set between July 23, 1948 and November 22, 1949.

From the ordinary causes of maternal deaths, toxemia, hemorrhage and infections, Gallinger has come through the past two years with a clean slate of no deaths from such causes, Dr. Barter said.

D. C. Wage Increase For 6000 Proposed

Representative George P. Miller (D., Calif.) yesterday introduced a bill which would result in a wage boost for an estimated 6000 District government employes.

It applies to municipal workers whose wages are fixed by the District wage board and would make their pay keep pace with that of employes in the Defense Department hereabouts, whose wages also are fixed by boards.

Immediate application of the bill would result in increases for city workers of from 7 to 12 cents an hour, District officials estimated.

The Commissioners would have 15 days to issue an order making the District wages conform to Defense Department pay.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) yesterday introduced a bill to make the District's minimum wage law apply to men. He said the measure's purpose is to protect women and minors from replacement by men in their jobs.

27 Oppose Transit Fare Hike

District Federation of the National Federation of Federal Employes; Mrs. Susie Scott, Morning Star Baptist Church; John E. Quisenberry, 3100 Wisconsin ave. nw.; Mrs. Harriet B. Slaughter, 4918 Lee st. ne., and Malcolm T. Daniels, Midway Civic Association.

The company case began with testimony by J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller for 17 years. He said the application was due to three factors:

1. The decision of the commission to increase rates less than the amount requested in 1948.

2. A wage award which increased employe pay by 10 cents an hour, and added other benefits.

3. A continuing 6.2 percent decline in passenger traffic, which during February and the first 28 days of March increased to 9.2 percent.

If the usual decline in traffic of the past two months continues—for which Heberle had no explanation—the witness indicated even the request for a 15-cent cash fare, sale of tokens at six for 80 cents, and elimination of the weekly pass, would prove inadequate. Present rates are 13 cents cash, tokens at three for 35 cents and a weekly pass at $1.75.

PUC Estimates Scored

The company official criticized the 1948 computations of V. A. McElfresh, chief accountant of the PUC. Heberle said McElfresh's forecast that the 1948 fares would provide additional revenues of more than two million dollars had fallen about $675,000 short of reality.

Witnesses who opposed any increase were:

Andrew J. Temple, president, Bradbury Heights Citizens Association; Leo J. Richards, 6410 Ridge dr., Brookmont, Md.; Robert L. Pollard, Federation of Civic Associations; John C. Estes, Fort Dupont Citizens Association; Patrick M. Tolliver, president, Deanwood Civic Association.

Radio Holds No Fear for Miss Johnson

The Washington Post
ADELAIDE JOHNSON
interviewed on air

Mere radio interviews hold no fears for Adelaide Johnson, one of the embattled leaders of the suffragette movement, well-known sculptress of feminist figures and friend of Abraham Lincoln and Rousseau.

"After all, I've lived through 103 years," she pointed out yesterday, in her gentle but youthful voice, after she had been interviewed over WQQW for 15 minutes.

"Nervous? Oh, no, I'm not nervous—ever!" she declared. She said her 104th birthday would be on September 26.

Nelson and Sarah Griggs, who conduct the "Welcome Wagon" program on which she appeared, found her an old hand at radio appearances.

She has been on "We, the People," on television, and she may appear shortly at a congressional hearing, if what she hopes comes true.

For a bill has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) to establish as a national shrine the studio home at 230 Maryland ave. ne. where Miss Johnson lived alone until she was 100.

Miss Johnson's "adopted daughter," Mrs. Meta Grace Keebler, with whom she now lives at 126 C st. ne., declared America, rather than Miss Johnson, would benefit if the plan goes through.

Not only are there several sculptures at the studio to be housed, but also a number of documents and other mementoes of the Civil War period, she explained.

The studio home was sold for taxes some 10 years ago—and if the Government doesn't take it over, it will be torn down to make way for an apartment house, Mrs. Keebler said.

Another part of the bill in the Senate would direct the Capitol architect to have a bust made of Miss Johnson, "the Sculptor of the Woman's Movement," to be placed next to her own sclputure of Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, which is in the crypt of the Capitol.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday urged the President to appoint a nonpartisan "leading citizens'" commission to study the whole Government policy on spending.

In an address before the American Retail Federation at the Shoreham Hotel, Senator Taft suggested the commission as an alternative to raising taxes or facing "national calamity." He said increasing taxes would be a "very dangerous policy."

Taft's citizen commission would have "much broader" functions than the Hoover Commission, which has studied Governmental reorganization rather than policy changes, the Senator said.

Farm Program Restudy

The Ohio Republican wants the commission, to make a "complete restudy" of the Nation's agricultural program. It would look into the twelve billion dollars he said is being spent this year on individuals who "at the moment . . . are getting something for nothing."

Cited in this category were those on public assistance programs, on retirement pensions, unemployment compensation or receiving dividends on life insurance policies.

Senator Taft called deficit spending "demoralizing" to Congress and an "easy road to socialism." He disagreed with those who justify a budget deficit because of a cold war.

"If we could have financed the Second World War out of taxes we should have done so," he declared. Failure raised the cost of living by 70 percent and cut the value of a dollar almost in half."

In urging a commission to find ways of cutting current Government spending, Senator Taft charged that there is now "little money for new businesses" because of high taxes, and added, "We can perhaps improve this condition at our present level of taxation by devising some means of reducing the double taxation on risk enterprise, and directing the large savings from lower income groups into industry rather than into institutions which can only lend money."

Would Taper Off ECA

Senator Taft told the retailers he thought ECA should be "rapidly tapered off," but that he did not think "we can afford to cut the national defense forces."

Commenting on a six-billion-dollar spending cut proposed by Senators Harry Byrd (D., Va.) and Walter F. George (D., Ga.), Taft said he thought this a "practical program."

"A good many of the programs," he said, cannot be cut off over night, and so I would be willing to accept some smaller deficit for the year 1951 if we can see a balance in 1952."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) advised retailers to back a Government spending policy which would cut waste, but not cripple public purchasing power to the point of blocking business expansion.

Mechanical Sleuth to Spot Heart Disease Exhibited Here

A new diagnostic machine designed to detect heart attack conditions long before they show up in clinical tests was demonstrated here yesterday.

The instrument, the Krasno-Ivy Flicker Photometer, seeks out the hidden circulatory conditions through patient response to a flickering beam of light as seen by the patient.

Demonstrating its worth, one of its developers, Dr. Louis R. Krasno, research clinician of the University of Illinois, yesterday accurately diagnosed the heart condition of five known subjects at the United States Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md. A sixth volunteer patient, with no medical case history, was classed by Dr. Krasno as a borderline case.

A similar demonstration, it was stated, was put on Monday at the Walter Reed Hospital, Army Medical Center here. For the Army demonstration, Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, vice president of the University of Illinois and codeveloper of the instrument, was present.

The new machine, Dr. Krasno explained, employs a controlled beam of light made to flicker by the use of a rotating shutter. At high speeds, the flicker is unnoticeable by all humans, but as the shutter is slowed down the flicker becomes perceptible.

The test works on the principle that coronary attacks and high blood pressure do not come on suddenly. A predisposition to such attacks, it was explained, may be detected in activity of the arteries of the eyes in their ability to distinguish light movement.

All patients with known heart conditions involving coronary thrombosis and high blood pressure are slower in noting the flicker, Dr. Krasno explained.

The subject is tested several times. The first test establishes his "base line," the speed of the light cut-off at which the subject first reports seeing the flicker. Subsequent tests are made within minutes after the subject is given a nitroglycerin tablet to dissolve in his mouth.

Three of the patients yesterday had case histories of coronary thrombosis, or clotting within the coronary arteries, the arteries which feed the heart itself. Dr. Krasno picked them out as heart attack potentials.

Murray Urges Move Now to Unify Labor

CIO President Philip Murray yesterday proposed an immediate "common program" for the Nation's major labor organizations, with the ultimate goal of "organic unity" of all American labor.

Murray urged the creation of a joint union committee, on the national level, with authority to coordinate organized labor's efforts in the economic, legislative and political spheres of activity.

The unity suggestion of the Congress of Industrial Organizations was made, in letters by Murray, to the American Federation of Labor, railroad brotherhoods, United Mine Workers and International Association of Machinists, which together represent more than 90 percent of the Nation's 16 million union workers.

Murray charged that an "unholy coalition" of Republicans and Democrats has "frustrated all progress toward our common goal of social and economic justice," put over the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act, and failed to stimulate full employment.

Treasury to Study Tax Decline

By The Associated Press

The United States Treasury plans a study to determine the reason for a sharp drop in income taxes paid by professional men, farmers and higher salaried people.

A tally of March tax collections yesterday showed a substantial overall decrease, and Secretary of the Treasury Snyder attributed it in large part to a decrease in tax payments made outside the withholding system.

But Snyder said the development necessitates no change in the Administration's tax program. President Truman has proposed to reduce sales taxes by 650 million dollars and raise other taxes so that revenues will increase by a net of one million dollars.

Some experts calculate that total tax receipts this fiscal year, which ends June 30, will be more than one billion dollars below estimates.

But Snyder said yesterday that Federal spending is running below estimates by about the same amount as tax receipts. For that reason, he said, there should be no "marked change" in the $5,500,000,000 budget deficit which Mr. Truman anticipated when he made his tax proposals in January.

Highlights of the tally included these showings:

A 16 percent slump in March receipts of corporate income taxes and non-withholding individual tax payments combined, as compared to March of last year.

A 4.5 percent lag in overall budget receipts for the first three quarters of this fiscal year compared to the same part of last year. This year's receipts had been estimated at $37,800,000,000.

Reorganizing Steps Started in County

Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday took a first step toward reorganizing the county's government.

The Commissioners put both their counsel and assistant counsel on a full time basis and directed them to draw up legal data necessary to put the Sothoron Act permitting the reorganization in effect.

Jerrold V. Powers, counsel to the commissioners, who helped draft the Sothoron Act, will receive $7200 a year under the plan, and Robert Mathias, assistant counsel, will get $3600. The change was made effective retroactive to April 1.

The commissioners instructed Powers and Mathias to take over office space in the county courthouse in Upper Marlboro. There they will compose drafts of departmental ordinances for the county's governmental organization. Hearings on the ordinances must be held before July 1.

In addition, the commissioners announced all county offices will be closed Friday. County schools will close today, for a week's Easter holiday.

5 Area Men Pass Tests in Accounting

Richmond, Va., April 4 (AP).—Five northern Virginians were among 34 persons who passed accountants' examinations held last November, the State Board of Accountancy announced today.

The five are John Thomas Holliday, Falls Church; William Henry Harrison, jr., Arlington; Henry B. Jordan, Falls Church; John Wilson Vaughan, Alexandria, and Claude R. Vess, Arlington.

The exams given were in accounting practice, accounting theory, auditing and commercial law. A total of 297 persons took the exams in whole or part. The board announced that the next exams for certified public accountants will be held in November.

Losses Cut To $9873 By Hospital

Alexandria Hospital's operating loss dropped from $62,645 in 1947 to $9873 in 1949, according to the annual report of Van C. Adams, administrator.

The sharp drop in the hospital's deficit resulted from a financial reorganization started two years ago, Adams told the annual meeting of the Alexandria Hospital Corp Wednesday night at Carter Hall.

In comparing the 1949 figure with that of 1947, Adams explained that a comparable figure was not available for 1948 because in that year the hospital conducted a public fund-raising drive. Part of the funds were applied to operating revenue and some to nonoperating revenue, he said "thus rendering all comparisons void."

The corporation, whose membership limit was raised from 37 to 200 last year as part of the reorganization plan, elected seven new members to the hospital board of directors and added 15 new names to its own roster.

New directors are Arthur I. Shaffer, Mrs. Nora Lamborne, Mrs. Harold M. Schultz, Leroy S. Bendheim, Mrs. J. B. Collins, jr., the Rev. A. E. Gysan and Frederick L. Cornell.

Elected to the corporation were the Rev. Mr. Gysan, Mrs. Lamborne, Jack B. Colbert, Mrs. Sidney Weil, Mrs. Martha D. Pfeiffer, Abbey J. Mintz, Dr. Bruce Silcox, C. H. Moore, Paul Eckman, Miss Eleanor Nugent, Richard F. Downham, jr., E. Waller Dudley, William W. Koontz and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sheads.

Group Accepts Resignation of Ballston Unit

The Arlington County Civic Federation last night accepted the resignation of the new Ballston Citizens Association, but denied it "an attempt to brand the civic association as a political organization."

In a letter approved by a majority voice vote, the federation termed the association's withdrawal "regrettable," and said it was especially so because it was "designed to bring discredit upon the civic federation and . . . to malign its good name."

The New Ballston Association voted to withdraw from the county-wide group in March on a motion by its secretary-treasurer George C. Updegraff because it said the federation was functioning "principally for the local political advancement of selected individuals rather than a civic organization for the coordination and accomplishment of community welfare projects . . ."

In its reply to the New Ballston group, the federation denied that it had "worked for the election of any candidate for public office or has, in any manner whatsoever, participated in political campaigns . . ."

Higher Gas Tax, Road Tolls Studied for Md. Highways

Marylanders may pay higher gasoline taxes and State road users may have to pay tolls as a means of financing new State highway construction.

Robert M. Reindollar, chairman of the Maryland State Roads Commission, said those methods now were being considered to help finance construction of new highway projects undertaken after the current year.

Reindollar spoke before a luncheon session of the D. C. Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association. He said that during the past four years, the State has embarked on a program which has meant rehabilitation or construction of 1144 miles of State roads at a cost of 150 million dollars. He said that when the 1951 Maryland General Assembly convenes, the State Roads Commission must have a definite program for financing construction of future projects.

Reindollar said the toll system, if used, would be placed at a few principal points on limited access roadways. Motorists would be warned before approaching the gates that they would be required to pay tolls if they continued on the roadways. Reindollar said there would be turn-offs to older roads provided for those motorists who did not wish to pay the tolls.

Fairfax Gets Plan for Mobile Trailer for Church Classes

A plan to provide "free-time" religious education classes for Fairfax County pupils in a mobile trailer-classroom was laid before the county board of education yesterday.

The proposal came from the recently formed Fairfax County Association of Churches, which proposes to furnish the mobile classroom, provide for a teacher and pay all costs from voluntary contributions.

"Free-time" church classes were discontinued by the board last year to avoid controversy centering on their constitutionality.

The Rev. W. A. Wright, jr., pastor of the Merrifield Methodist Church, said use of the trailer would erase a legal question which arose when opponents of the religious education classes objected to use of school property for the program.

At yesterday's meeting, the board approved reappointment of 39 school principals, but delayed action on two others pending a settlement of financial differences with the Army. Appointment of principals for two elementary schools at Fort Belvoir was deferred, according to Supt. W. T. Woodson, because authorities at the military post have not yet paid for the education of military personnel for the years of 1948-49 and 1949-50.

Woodson said the board is asking the Army to pay about $100 a year for education of each of 400-odd pupils who attend the two Fort Belvoir schools and other schools in the county.

The board also accepted title to a 9-acre tract in the new Shirley-Duke apartment development for school use. The ground was donated by the developers.

Dr. Meriam Resignation Is Accepted

The Montgomery County Council yesterday accepted "with regret" the resignation of Dr. Lewis Meriam, a member of the council at large.

At the same time, the council announced it expects to appoint a successor as soon as possible. Under the county charter, council vacancies must be filled within 30 days.

Dr. Meriam's resignation was submitted to the council more than a month ago, although this was not publicly learned until last Friday.

This delay was occasioned, according to Council President Frederic P. Lee and Mrs. Dorothy Himstead, council member, because "it was hoped Dr. Meriam could be persuaded to change his mind."

Dr. Meriam, who is vice president of the Brookings Institution, stated in his letter of resignation that his decision was prompted by the pressure of work there.

"It would be highly reprehensible for me to continue here," he said yesterday, "when I can't devote nearly enough time to county affairs."

Lee praised the retiring councilman for his work in "spearheading" the establishment of a sound financial program for the county.

Also at yesterday's meeting, Finance Director Alexander K. Hancock reported taxes for the current fiscal year totaling $6,747,000 have been collected to date.

Grants Proposed For Constructing School Facilities

The Community Facilities Service, General Services Administration, yesterday advocated a Federal program of grants in aid to state and local governments for school construction.

Pere F. Seward, Commissioner, advocated that most state and local Governments match Federal funds on a 50 percent basis, in testimony before the House Education and Labor subcommittee headed by Representative Wingate Lucas (D., Tex.).

"However," he said, "provision must be made in the State plans for grants of Federal funds for as much as 90 to 100 percent of the costs to meet the needs in some impoverished school districts."

Battle Signs Six Virginia Area Bills

Richmond, Va., April 4 (Spl.).—Governor Battle today signed six bills sponsored by Delegate Edwin Lynch, of Fairfax, in the 1950 General Assembly.

They were among more than 50 passed by the recent session and approved by the Governor during the current "constructive" session, called for the formality of signing bills.

The Lynch bills would:

Provide a new charter for Falls Church as a city of the second class; permit increases in Fairfax County School Board salaries; provide that the Highway Commission shall require water companies to furnish fire protection lines where mains are being laid; set the per diem pay of commissioners and surveyors for rearranging magisterial districts at $25; and permit the town council of Falls Church to request the county zoning board to serve for the town in lieu of appointing a commission.

The Governor also signed the Senate bill directing the State Board of Education to prepare tests for public school children to determine what they have learned.

Meanwhile, he issued a memorandum to all state agency heads calling for "economy of operation."

He urged that each agency "carefully examine" possible reduction in the number of employes. He asked that "no new positions be created unless a clear justification may be made as to essential need."

'Fast for Peace' Group Appeals To Red Embassy

Members of the Washington Fast for Peace Committee called at the Soviet Embassy yesterday to leave "An Appeal to the Russian People to Renounce War."

The group had called at the White House Monday to ask President Truman to rescind the order to make the H-bomb.

The Russian first secretary, Nikolai Statskevich, received the group at the Embassy, Bill Sutherland, delegation leader, said.

Statskevich told them that the Soviet government was interested in peace but was being rebuffed by the Americans, Sutherland said.

The group of 44 has been fasting since Saturday midnight at Inspiration House, 1867 Kalorama rd. nw., in protest against war preparations. The fast lasts until sunrise services Easter Morning.

Seeing Daylight

Several correspondents have raised the question why we have depreciated the District Commissioners' straw poll on daylight saving time. We are, of course, gratified by the strong preference for daylight saving shown by the poll so far. Perhaps some such form of balloting was the best way of registering popular opinion, or a part of it, under present conditions. But this kind of balloting, which at best reaches only a small percentage of District residents and which has no precautions to insure fair distribution or to prevent stacking, can hardly be described as a genuine extension of the democratic process. It has been a great burden on the Police Department, and, indeed, it seems a mockery in a voteless city. In no ordinary city we know would daylight saving be a subject for such temporizing and annual stabs at opinion sampling. Either there would be a real referendum in which qualified voters would decide the issue permanently, or elected city officials would decide and the people would have recourse on election day. We suggest that this is the best way to do business in the District, too.

Peanuts And Potatoes

President Truman probably was right in approving the patchwork peanut-cotton-potato bill just passed by Congress. However, he also was abundantly right in his observation that "if each step made in improving the farm program in one place is to be accompanied by a step backward in another place, we will fail to make the advances in that program which are necessary if it is to retain the approval of the American people."

Assuredly the bill contains some steps backward. For example, in providing extra acreage for production of peanuts to be crushed for oil (but which will not come under the price support program) it sets up a two-price system that will be difficult to administer. There is, as the President says, no need for such oil production; moreover, when more peanut acreage is in effect, it will be hard to resist demands for price support of oil peanuts.

With respect to cotton acreage, some of the hardship adjustments provided by the bill are undoubtedly warranted because of misunderstandings of the present law. However, we cannot agree with the President that the distribution of cotton acreage allotments on the basis of the farmer's total crop land is a bad system. Cotton is a great robber of the soil. The present allotment system encourages diversification by giving little or no cut to farmers who have practiced conservation and instituted other crops.

On potatoes—the really disgraceful failure of the support program—the bill will make practically no difference on the 1950 crop. Congress has, however, provided marketing quotas for 1951. This is a distinct advance, though perhaps a little skepticism is warranted by the past record of Congress in gutting limitation measures before they take effect. If the quotas are instituted, this will be the first time they have been tried on a nonstorable crop—that is, one on which all production must be disposed of promptly—and extremely accurate forecasting by the Department of Agriculture will be necessary.

Mr. Truman's plea for the application of production payments to potatoes—whereby prices would fall to their market level and the Government would pay an adjustment to farmers—does not mention the Brannan Plan, but presumably this is what he has in mind. The trouble is that under the Brannan Plan payments would be figured at 100 percent of parity, or $1.59, whereas on the current 60 percent basis support is around $1. The Brannan Plan would put too high a value on potatoes. Even with rigid marketing quotas it would encourage expensive practices such as irrigation and excess fertilization, and it would tend to keep ubiquitous fringe farmers growing potatoes. Moreover, lower market prices would have a questionable influence on demand since potatoes are already cheap; but if above-quota production undermined the market price, the cost to the Government could be higher than under the present system. A lot more radical surgery will be necessary to effect a cure to the potato problem; indeed, if potato price supports are justified at all, they ought to be tied to some means of encouraging shifts to other forms of production.

Project Berlin

Soviet aggression is a strange and curious compound of which one of the ingredients is rumormongering. There was the case a few months ago of the rumor that Russia was about to denounce its peace treaty with Finland. Since under this treaty, the Russians can do almost anything in Finland, the rumor was clearly made-in-Moscow, but it got into the papers in America, and so had a double circulation in Europe: first as a rumor, then as a report from America. The result was jitters in Sweden, and perhaps to a slight extent elsewhere, including America. The rumor of the moment concerns the western sectors of Berlin. A week ago the feeling was that an armed invasion was planned for the end of May; now it is said that the entry will be merely propagandistic.

It is difficult to know what to believe. But in the case of Berlin, where the evidence remains of the implacable determination of the Muscovites to control it, there can never be a letdown in preparedness for the worst. This is the feeling on the part of the Iron Curtain Refugee Campaign of the International Rescue Committee, Inc., 103 Park ave., New York City. An urgent appeal for help has been sent out under the signatures of Admiral Byrd, General Clay, and Mr. Sumner Welles in behalf of the campaign. They ask for contributions to a Project Berlin taking the form of a massive shipment of Government surplus powdered milk and powdered eggs to needy children and refugees from the Russian zone in the western sectors of Berlin. The object is to buoy up the spirit of resistance of the hard-pressed Berliners in the western sectors.

We find the idea sound, and herewith commend it. The Russo-Western agreement ending the blockade last year brought no real alleviation to Berlin. Moscow instituted what has been known as a "cold blockade"—meaning a series of interferences which slow down and sometimes stop the flow of goods in and out of Berlin. For instance, the Soviet guards or the Soviet organized and trained eastern German stooge police will suddenly demand new documents, or send trucks back to their place of departure for additional documents. The consequent restraint on trade and in turn the economic tribulation may be imagined; there are over 300,000 unemployed in western districts and over a third of Berlin lives on public charity. Apathy comes from hope deferred and empty bellies, and is said to be growing on top of the Berliners' other trials. What Messrs. Byrd, Clay, and Welles suggest would do as much for the spirit as the body, for it would show the Berliners in their predicament that they are not forgotten, but are appreciated as front-line defenders in the cold war.

The massive shipment idea is one that was used to such good effect prior to the Italian elections under Mr. Drew Pearson's auspices. It is also an instance in a way of the total diplomacy that Mr. Acheson advocates. What he wants, of course, is a united backing for official prosecution of the cold war, but, occasionally, there is room for every American to be his own diplomat, and this is one such occasion. When people talk to people with food, then there is evidence of fellow-feeling as well as of aid.

Cold War Treason

The "reformed" House Committee on Un-American Activities seems to be in as much of a hurry and as impatient of constitutional restraints as ever. "The nature of modern war—the fact that nations find themselves confronted nowadays with undeclared but actual warfare—makes it necessary," the committee stated in its annual report, "that the legal definition of treason, and the penalties attached thereto, be broadened to cover a period like the present cold war." So far as the committee members are concerned, the founding fathers can go fly a kite.

The founding fathers had an intimate knowledge of the ways in which a charge of treason could be used to silence dissent and to quash political heterodoxy. They had in mind the words of Montesquieu, the brilliant French political philosopher who was, in a sense, the spiritual father of the American Republic: "If the crime of high treason be made indeterminate, this alone is sufficient to make a government degenerate into an arbitrary power. Words that remain only an idea do not constitute an overt act." And precisely because they feared the contrivance of what James Madison called "new-fangled and artificial treasons," they stipulated in the Constitution that "Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort." This has been uniformly construed by the courts ever since 1807 as meaning that for treason to be committed, war must be actually levied against the United States. Congress may constitutionally declare at any time, of course, that a state of war exists; but it may not, in the absence of such a declaration, constitutionally determine that a "cold war" or a state of diplomatic tension or a barrage of hostile propaganda constitutes a war.

The committee desires also to diminish the protection from prosecution afforded spies by the existing statute of limitations. We believe the reform is needed; and we have urged extending the period of liability for peacetime prosecution under the Espionage Act from 3 years to 10. But the committee's report says that "under our present laws, we have found that a long list of Communist operatives who have committed acts of espionage and treachery in the interest of a foreign power have remained immune to punishment due to the present form of the statute of limitations." We think the committee ought to recall that the statute of limitations gave no protection whatever to the 30 individuals named as Communists and spies by Elizabeth Bentley in testimony before the committee—the only long list we know of. These persons were accused by Miss Bentley of having committed espionage in the early 1940s when the United States was at war. Espionage was then a capital offense and no statute of limitations applied to it. The names on Miss Bentley's long list were presented to a grand jury which indicted none of the 30—presumably because it did not consider Miss Bentley a credible witness.

The Strachey Incident

Those unkind friends of Secretary Johnson who call him the only bull who carries his own china shop around with him will adduce The Hague incident over British Secretary of War John Strachey as supporting testimony. Exactly what happened nobody seems to know. But, judging from the furor in London, there must have been some queries raised and mentioned outside the council room at The Hague about Mr. Strachey's reliability, and they most probably came from the top, for Mr. Strachey has been under suspicion in the Pentagon ever since he was switched from Food to War in the new Attlee ministry. In point of fact, the questioning also arose over the transfer of Mr. Strachey's chief, Emmanuel Shinwell, to the post of Minister of Defense, for both of them are ideologically akin. The suspicion fed on the protests about the appointments which a certain section of British opinion directed at Premier Attlee.

Neither Minister has ever been a member of the Communist Party, but Mr. Strachey, according to his statement, "supported the Communist doctrine in the years which preceded the last war," and, as recently as January 10, Mr. Shinwell is reported to have said "he had no particular quarrel with the objects of communism. What he quarreled with was not its object, which could be quite reasonable. It was its technique in trying to achieve its objective." Mr. Strachey, in addition, had been the subject of deportation proceedings in the United States, where he was influential, as in Britain, among youthful intellectuals. There is nothing in the record of recent years to show any pro-Soviet orientation; nevertheless Messrs. Shinwell and Strachey remain convinced Marxists.

The appointments, coming on top of the Fuchs case, bothered the military men on both sides of the Atlantic, as well as Secretary Johnson. In the same way the retention in France of Joliot-Curie as head of the atomic energy project has aroused misgivings. Here is a divergence of attitude between the United States and its Allies which might well put a crimp in the plans for an integrated defense of the Atlantic community. It therefore deserves attention. Admittedly there is danger from infiltration, and the Allies have thus to be on guard against internal as well as external enemies. The danger, however, is not all one-sided. If there is danger of secret-peddling in Britain, are not the British equally fearful of the way that some Senators are branding as security risks some of our reputable officials and want to spread confidential files on the record? The questioning does indeed cut both ways, and the best way to handle it is frontally, with common security safeguards; not by whispering doubts for publication to newspapermen.

Grady On The Job

Politics are meat and drink to the Greeks, and affiliations still represent choices of personalities, rather than of party programs. Yet, for all that, the people did vote for a change, for both the Populists and the Liberals, who had held power off and on for four years, lost a substantial number of seats. Judge of the surprise, then, when the Liberal Party leader, Sophocles Venizelos, formed a government. How this happened is not clear at this distance. But the outcome was not an insurance of stability of government, but of the reverse, and this at a time when the convalescent Greeks need an administration that will stop politiking and deal firmly with its economic responsibilities.

This is why Ambassador Grady addressed his remonstrance to Premier Venizelos. It may look like intervention. But the fact is that our Government did not make the slightest attempt to influence either the outcome of the election or the formation of a new government. And it is protesting in effect the perversion of the popular verdict only because of the holdup of recovery measures that may follow. In this respect the Greeks entered into joint obligations with the United States. Marshall aid was a "help for self-help" proposition, but there is no self-help evident in a situation in which there can be no action beyond mere jockeying for political position.

There is more than a hint in the Grady letter that dollar aid for several vital enterprises in Greece will not be forthcoming unless Greece makes the contribution which the Ambassador outlines. But it is the parliamentary paralysis that prevents any grapple with his list of essential domestic measures and reforms, and the ending of that paralysis is the need that Mr. Grady inscribes between the lines of his communication. All Greece knows the energy and goodwill and ability that Mr. Grady is bringing to Greek rehabilitation. But Mr. Grady cannot work without government cooperation. Only 27 months remain in which the Greek government may take advantage of American aid, and it is its plain duty to a people who have triumphed over their enemies and recovered a remarkable spirit of patriotism and self-reliance to use these months to good and constructive purpose.

Flour For China

The United States has supplied Chiang Kai-shek with planes and bombs to blast the Chinese people and their properties. Now we are facing a very serious famine. Viewing the long friendship enjoyed between our two peoples, it is a good opportunity for the Americans to demonstrate to the Chinese people their real intention by sending us flour—food instead of bombs.

It is the right time for our American friends to extend their helping hands. The writer is an importer of American goods, and I believe that it is also a good and paying proposition. Perhaps this famine can be relieved considerably with shipments of something like 100,000 tons of flour or wheat. This will cost approximately $10,000,000. It will be, however, sufficiently repaid by one year's trade with China. I figured at 5 percent profit for the sum of $200,000,000.

Billions of dollars have been spent to support the Chiang Kai-shek group, and nothing resulted—except helping the Chinese Communists have American equipment, this being turned over to them by Chiang's army.

Our American friends, please do something!

German Expellees

The March 11 letter from James Finucane states that Germans should have equal immigration rights with persons of other nationalities in coming to the United States. Under our present immigration law, Germany is allotted the second highest quota; Britain is first with 65,721 and Germany is second with 27,370, out of a total yearly quota allotment to all countries of 153,879.

Mr. Finucane supports Senator McCarran's displaced persons definition, which would include not only DPs in the care of International Refugee Organization, but also the 12 million expellees and others. He feels this definition should be accepted in order to tear down the barriers against expellees contained in the present DP Act.

On February 12, 1946, the U. N. General Assembly adopted a resolution which in part reads as follows: "The General Assembly considers that Germans being transferred to Germany from other states or who fled to other states from Allied troops do not fall under action of this declaration insofar as their situation may be decided by Allied forces of occupation in Germany, in agreement with the governments of the respective countries." The IRO constitution was drawn up on the basis of these principles.

When the United States accepted membership in the IRO it assumed responsibility to help solve the problems of the DPs in the care of the IRO. DP legislation was enacted in 1948. Therefore, when Senator McCarran's definition of DPs became public, the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Representative Celler, said, ". . . Acceptance of these provisions will mean a denial of our international obligations . . . and a rift in the direction of international harmony."

Nevertheless, Congress has concerned itself with the expellee problem. The DP Act of 1948 contains a provision which makes 50 percent of the German and Austrian quotas available for persons of German ethnic origin.

The amendment to the DP Act now pending in the Senate would authorize the expenditure of 2½ million dollars to finance the transportation of expellees who will be coming in under the provisions of this act. This amendment also authorizes representatives of the Government of the United States to participate in a conference for the purpose of studying and making recommendations toward the solution of the problem of persons of German ethnic origin.

The reason why the number of persons of German ethnic origin admitted to the United States is small is clearly outlined in House Report 1841, which states, "These people simply do not have the necessary funds or sufficient assurance of support from people in the United States to enable them to qualify as immigrants under the public charge provisions of the Immigration Act . . . of those examined and found not qualified, failure to meet the security requirements of Section 13 accounts for as much as 35 to 40 percent . . ."

Losing Game

Let us forget for a moment the confusion of the charges of communism and the playing of partisan politics. If this international crisis were simply a baseball game, and Secretary Acheson were the pitcher, he would be taken out of the box at once. We are losing the game.

Disloyal Workers

I am writing a protest to your campaign against Senator McCarthy and his attempt to bring to the open everybody apparently but The Washington Post, now that there is more "dirt" than what has come out in the open. If the Senate can't have access to the files who can?

Apparently you are finding it lucrative to protect or attempt to cover up the mess in our Government. But the truth has a way of coming to the surface and it will this time in spite of your un-American, un-Christian and one-sided position. I thought The Washington Post believed in finding out the truth.

What kind of evidence would you need to convince you that in our departments of Government there are disloyal workers? Can anyone follow Roosevelt and Truman and believe otherwise? Need one look further than Yalta or Potsdam for evidence? Or for that matter even Roosevelt recognition of the gangsters. Then more recently the end of World War II. Now China.

"Irish Partition"

I beg to differ on several points in your April 1 editorial, "Irish Partition." First, it was not partition that brought on the civil war in 1922, but rather the refusal of a minority group, led by Eamon de Valera, Charles Burgess, and Austin Stack, to accept the majority decision of both the Dail and the Irish people to abide by the Treaty of 1921, which gave Ireland its independence.

Second, partition was not ultimately responsible for the secession of Ireland from the British Commonwealth. Ireland seceded partly because of a political maneuver by the present government designed to outflank the De Valera forces by moving to the left of them on the nationalist issue, and partly because for years the extreme nationalists had attacked violently the commonwealth connection while deliberately covering the benefits which flowed from it.

Third, the issue is not alone economic, but political and religious as well. Politically, the majority in Northern Ireland are loyal to the crown and commonwealth concept. They also fear such things as the compulsory learning of Gaelic, and they resent the qualifications in Gaelic which are laid down for posts in the civil service. On the religious issue, there is of course a great deal of religious bigotry on both sides, but I must honestly say that, although I am a Catholic, if I were a Protestant I should not wish to be in the position which will befall the Protestants of Northern Island if they come under the control of the Catholic government at Dublin.

Finally, the prospects of unification today are not better, but worse, than any time since 1922. No British government, Labor or Conservative, would last five minutes which would attempt to force Northern Ireland out of the United Kingdom. Furthermore, if Northern Ireland would not accept dominion status in 1921, what chance is there of them joining a state which has severed completely its connection with the British Commonwealth? MARY CUSKELLY.

At first, I attributed the House's "Irish Amendment" to playfulness and to a perfect willingness to juggle America's standing "just for the hell of it"; but on reading of the reluctance to renounce it, I feel maybe some actually want it.

Those who do should realize what is being asked.

Northern Ireland owes its separate existence to the fact that its inhabitants themselves were unwilling to be a part of a united Ireland. In fact, when Great Britain passed a law constituting a single Ireland, the Northern Irelanders made it clear that they would revolt against it, with arms if necessary. Northern Ireland has its own freely elected Parliament, which may at any time ask to join Ireland proper, but which has never shown the slightest inclination to do so. How, then, can we, the believers in freedom, including Ireland's freedom from Britain, take it on ourselves to decree that Northern Ireland shall unwillingly join Ireland?

You are to be congratulated on your March 30 editorial, "Krazy Kids." No matter what the truth about this vexed question, this undignified "shillelagh" by the Nation's elected representatives can do nothing but impair United States relations with its closest and stanchest ally, for the antics of Congress are unknown and unappreciated in the "pubs" of England and Scotland. Great Britain, after six years of war and five years of privation, may perhaps be forgiven if its sense of humor is not quite as keen as that of some Congressmen on the subject of ECA, which to the Britisher is a deeply appreciated necessity to avert the worst form of economic crisis and to enable his nation to continue to stand by the United States. Growing Up Signs In U. S.

By Malvina Lindsay

Antidote To Hysteria

SOMETIMES IT seems as if the Nation were composed only of angry, sputtering schoolchildren. Adolescent emotionalism over all the issues of the day appears rampant and promises to sound new moronic depths in the coming election campaign.

Yet—look at the best seller lists. See how The Mature Mind steadily holds a top place. Listen to what little quiet talk there is and note how often the word "mature" creeps into it. . . ." It wouldn't be mature to do that." . . . "My butcher (or maid, Congressman or mother-in-law) isn't at all mature." . . . "We must be sure the man we pick is mature."

It has even become fashionable to be mature. Clubs want speakers who will give the technique in one easy lesson. Yet this writer remembers that about a decade ago a woman's club spurned the idea that a speaker deal with such a subject. It was too suggestive of a size 42 dress, club leaders thought. How to be youthful (immature)—or at least seem that way—was what people wanted to hear about, they insisted.

Since then, however, a greater interest in mental health, particularly in children's emotional health, has developed. Leading psychiatrists and educators have been preaching that the ultimate hope of a peaceful world lies in bringing up children who will be emotionally mature adults. Now the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, to be held in December, is making mental and emotional health its major theme.

EVEN IN diplomacy a new emphasis on the mature approach is showing up. In the last session of the General Assembly of the United Nations the American delegation inaugurated a new "consultant" method of presenting its proposals. Instead of going in advance to other delegations and saying condescendingly, with the air of a great power, "Now here's what we're going to do and we want you to line up behind it," the American delegates said in effect to their colleagues, "Now here is our thinking on this matter, and we'd like to hear yours and see what we can work out."

In this way areas of agreement on many issues were reached before proposals came to the floor. Thus some time-consuming and often acrimonious debates (often based on misunderstandings) were avoided. Moreover, a demonstration of maturity and democracy (two ideas that naturally go together) was given.

It is true that many persons today may be "taking up maturity" as they would a new religion, disease, or fashion. Many do not realize what a lifetime job it is to become mature and how very early training for it must start.

Recently Dr. Edward Strecker, head of the psychiatric department of the University of Pennsylvania, warned that the Nation had more to fear from people who never grew up than from the H-bomb. While he declared the pattern of emotional immaturity once set in children could never be wholly eradicated, he did not shut off all hope for adults still ambitious to grow up.

IN FACT he listed eight ways by which grown-ups can rate themselves on emotional maturity. They are: ability to stick to a job and struggle through until it is finished; ability to give more than is required in a given situation; persistence in carrying out a goal despite difficulties; ability to endure unpleasantness, discomfort, frustration, hardship; independence or the ability to make one's own decisions; determination, or a will to live, achieve, succeed; capacity to cooperate, to work with others and under authority; flexibility or patience plus adaptability and compromise.

However superficial the present pursuit of maturity may be, a little of what its seekers learn and strive for will stick. It is some advance that in the circles where attitudes are determined, social patterns set, there is a swing away from the deification of adolescence, at least in the realm of behavior.

True, the juvenile-minded will long remain in the ascendancy, will continue to make a big noise, do a lot of screaming and kicking. They will continue to abet group hysteria over all matters that touch their emotions.

But in the long run the present concern over maturity among readers, thinkers, students, educators, is bound to bear some fruit in national leadership. It is bound to build a national asset of strength—citizens who are grown up inside as well as outside.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Real Lesson

FRANKFURT, GERMANY.—This complex, fear-distorted German situation is the key to the European future. After spending a full month traveling in all the zones of Germany and talking to many hundreds of Germans of every kind and condition, this reporter would sum up the grim lesson of Germany in a single perhaps platitudinous sentence.

If you do not try to win a cold war, you must expect to lose it.

The great mistake that is still being made in the highest quarters at home is to suppose there are other differences between a cold war and a hot war besides the absence of shooting. In fact, there is no difference whatever, either in the need to mobilize resources or in the ruthlessness of the methods that may be employed, or in the price of defeat.

Assume, for example, that our present Baldwinlike approach to the cold war is continued, and we therefore lose Germany to the Soviet Union. The loss of Germany will be a mere incident in the larger loss of western Europe. In the new strategic situation thus created, we shall have only two choices. We shall have to choose between surrendering ourselves in our turn, or sacrificing all that is good in our society, in order to transform the United States into a permanently bristling, permanently alerted armed camp.

NOR, unfortunately, is there any escape from this danger in Stalin's so-called theory of coexistence, which Moscow is proclaiming in a way so reminiscent of the Hitler peace talk that always preceded another great Hitlerian grab. No one who has visited the Soviet zone of Germany can suppose for a moment that Germany can be reunited at present, except under direct Soviet auspices. This is the only kind of German unity that the Kremlin will now accept. No one who has seen the acceleration of the Soviet drive for German, and the commencement of the Soviet tactics of terror can really hope for the neutralization of Germany. You can proclaim the lamb's neutrality, but it will not be respected by the wolf.

Much more comfortable self-delusion about these hard facts can only lead to another Munich and perhaps a repetition of Munich's dreadful sequel. On the other hand, if we face the hard facts, we shall find our tormenting self-doubts suddenly dispelled. Victory will become the aim. And victory in the cold war is still within our grasp, if we make the decision soon enough to go over from the defensive to the offensive.

In Germany, particularly, the Western world possesses enormous unexploited assets for a cold-war offensive. First, there is Berlin, a tiny but vital enclave of freedom within the hideous slave farm that is the East zone. For a small annual sum, the West zones of Berlin can be rescued from their economic difficulties and transformed into show windows of the West. The spirit of the people is incomparable. From Berlin, a call to a new life can go out to every slave of the East zone.

SECOND, there is the deep and stubborn spirit of resistance that still animates the great mass of the people in Soviet Germany. There is no more moving experience than to talk, as this reporter has talked, to some of the grimy, tough young men who daily risk their lives to escape from the fearful enslavement of the uranium mines in the Erzgebirge. In those conversations, the magnificent Daumier cartoons, celebrating the courage of the workers in 1848, suddenly come alive. If they are given hope, these people will neither run away nor forever submit.

THIRD, there are the West Germans, now troubled and full of fear, but ready to be rallied if victory becomes the aim. Whether you go among industrialists or workers or intellectuals, you find the same discouragement over our present, inadequate defensive policy. But if you suggest to them that it is possible to take the offensive in the cold war, there is always the same eager response. They, too, will play their part in avoiding defeat. But taking the cold war offensive is the only way. And this transition from defensive to offensive will be no easy matter.

The first essential is to give the West genuine military security, so that the Kremlin will not be tempted to appeal to arms when they find their plans being frustrated. Thereafter, we in our turn can apply economic, political and psychological pressures to the Soviet empire, which in fact is more highly vulnerable than the West. With our superior resources mobilized, we may reasonably hope for a great change in the world balance of power with no hot war. This in turn will constitute the "conditions of fact" that Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson is always talking about. When these conditions of fact have been created, peaceful coexistence of the two systems will indeed become possible at last.

Liberal Republicans

By Marquis Childs

How To Finance Progressive Views?

AMONG liberal Republicans on Capitol Hill a statement of principles is being circulated that is intended to be the cornerstone of a new organization. As conceived by its sponsors, the new organization would be a rallying point for those who believe the only hope for the GOP is a positive, forward-looking program.

Childs

The sponsors hope that the new group can do for the Republicans what Americans for Democratic Action has done for the Democratic Party. It would be the focus for all Republican elements now distrustful of the dominant faction in the party that decided the issue in the coming election is "liberty versus socialism." It would also take in many Republicans eager to preserve a bipartisan or an unpartisan foreign policy and who are deeply disturbed by the tactics of the Taft-Wherry-Bridges leadership in the Senate.

Certainly, there is room for such an organization. Those of moderate views in the Republican Party who feel that a negative, "back to normalcy" campaign cannot possibly win are increasingly conscious of being excluded, denied any voice in party councils.

But many obstacles also stand in the way. Whether the new organization ever gets born is still an open question.

FIRST on the list of obstacles is money. The Republican National Committee is itself having a tough time raising funds. The Senate and House congressional campaign committees are competing for Republican generosity.

Still another group would be likely to find the pickings very slim. That, at any rate, is the fear of some who would like to see the new group formed, yet are fearful that it might tend more to divide than to unite the forces of Republicanism.

It is fear of splitting the party wide open that deters many who would like to join up. The declaration on civil rights, for example, is in striking contrast to the timid position taken by the party in its recent official policy statement. The declaration favors Federal power to arrest and prosecute lynchers and a fair employment practices law with criminal penalties for violators.

On health insurance the declaration favors the proposal of Senator Irving Ives and Representative Jacob Javits of New York. The Ives-Javits plan calls for Federal aid to cooperative health insurance units formed under Federal-State supervision. The charge to individuals for prepaid medical care would be based on the individual's income. With very little fanfare this proposal has gained considerable headway among both Republicans and Democrats in Congress.

In seeking a name for the new organization the sponsors ran into a lot of argument. Republicans for Progressive Action was one of the proposed names most hotly debated. But progressive is a word with unhappy connotations coming out of the Henry Wallace party.

IN THEIR convention held here over the weekend ADA, after a struggle within the executive board, decided to strike out any reference to support for the Fair Deal in ADA's policy statement. That was done on the insistence of a minority in the organization that has held from the beginning that ADA should not be linked to either of the parties.

The fact is, of course, that ADA's support has been given almost exclusively to Democratic candidates. Its success has brought angry denunciation from Chairman Guy George Gabrielson and others of the GOP high brass.

ADA has always taken a strongly anti-Communist line. The organization has vigorously supported the major measures of Administration foreign policy intended to unite and strengthen the free world.

In view of this fact it is astonishing to learn that in some communities a campaign of coercion and intimidation has been directed against ADA so that those who wish to join it must do so in secret. That, if it is actually true, is anti-American, antidemocratic, anti-everything that the American free system stands for.

I would like to see a new organization sparked by liberal Republicans come into being. Such competition within the framework of the two-party system is healthy and desirable. ADA has not transformed the Democratic Party. It is regarded by many Southern Democrats with the same suspicion and resentment that conservative Republicans cherish for it.

But it has produced an antidote to the smugness and complacency that invariably work to let things be as they are. It has helped to show the way to reasonable change in a swiftly changing world.

The Gallup Poll

GOP Voters Give Eisenhower First Choice for Presidency

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 4.—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is gaining popularity as the top choice of Republican voters for the presidential nomination of 1952, the latest survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows.

Running ahead of the field since last November, he leads today by a wide margin.

The second most popular man in the party, who has also been gaining supporters, is Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. Harold E. Stassen, a contender for the nomination in 1948, likewise ranks high in popularity for 1952.

Each voter was told:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible candidates for the Republican Party. Which ONE would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President?"

Here are the choices of the persons who classified themselves as Republicans. A comparison with last November is also shown:

	Today	Last Nov.
Eisenhower	37%	25%
Taft	17	15
Dewey	15	12
Stassen	12	19
Warren	5	10
Vandenburg	5	6
Bricker	3	3
Others	1	4
None, no choice	1	2
Don't know	4	4
	100%	100%

Although the presidential race itself is two years off and events may radically alter present-day sentiment, political forces are already beginning to take shape for the historic struggle.

After stating his candidate preference, each person questioned in the survey was asked:

"Which of the men on that list would be your second choice as a candidate for President on the Republican ticket?"

Results are more favorable to Eisenhower and to Stassen than to any of the others.

Should such men as Dewey, Warren and Vandenberg definitely bow out of the race or for one reason or another become "unavailable," more of their followers say at this time that they would go to Eisenhower than to any other candidate. The bulk of Stassen's followers also pick Eisenhower as their second choice.

On the other hand, the largest single group of supporters of Bricker in today's survey say they would prefer Taft if Bricker were not a candidate.

In the last three presidential elections the balance of power in American politics was held by those who call themselves "Independents," those who, in other words, do not consider themselves either Republicans or Democrats.

Here are the Republican leaders preferred for 1952 by those who call themselves "Independent" voters:

Eisenhower	33%
Stassen	15
Dewey	11
Taft	11
Warren	10
Vandenberg	5
Bricker	3
Others	4
None, no choice	3
Don't know	5
	100%

Should Eisenhower himself refuse to run, the largest single group of his followers say they would favor Stassen, with most of the rest going to Taft or Dewey. In fact, as Eisenhower has gained in popularity in recent months he has tended to draw followers from Stassen.

Liberal Versus Conservative

The fight between the liberal and conservative wings of the Republican Party is one of the major factors in GOP politics today.

To find out how many voters consider Eisenhower, Stassen, Taft and Dewey as "liberals" or conservatives," the Institute survey put this question to a cross-section of all voters regardless of their own party affiliation:

"Some of these men are thought of as being liberals, and others as conservatives. Which do you think of as being liberals and which do you think of as being conservatives?"

Many voters have not yet made up their minds just where any of the four men belong in the classification, even though the four men have been in the public eye for many years and their speeches and activities widely discussed in the press and over the radio.

In each case approximately half of the voters questioned could not place Taft, Stassen, Dewey and Eisenhower in one camp or the other.

In the case of Taft, those expressing an opinion agreed by a ratio of 5-to-1 in placing him in the "conservative" camp.

In the case of Dewey, a 3-to-2 majority put him in the "conservative" camp.

The majority of voters (2-2) placed Eisenhower in the "liberal" camp.

A very large E890$. MFWCMFW

The results may come as a surprise to candidates themselves. Some could undoubtedly make a good case for not being placed in the category where the public happens to place them.

Prichard Term In Ballot-Box Case Is Upheld

Cincinnati, April 4 (AP).—The United States Court of Appeals, Sixth District, today affirmed the two-year sentence of E. F. Prichard, jr., 34, Lexington, Ky., on a charge of ballot box stuffing.

The court's finding was unanimous. Prichard was not in court when the action was read. Whether he will appeal to the Supreme Court could not be learned immediately.

The onetime favorite of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt was sentenced to prison for two years by Judge H. Church Ford last July 14.

He was convicted specifically of conspiring to forge ballots in the 1948 presidential election in Bourbon County, Ky. Prichard has been free on $5000 bond.

Prichard held high positions in Washington during the Roosevelt Administration. At one time he was counsel for the Democratic national party.

He also was an aide to Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson and Justice Felix Frankfurter.

A. E. Funk, jr., 27, a law partner of Prichard, also was indicted in the case, but was acquitted by the Federal court jury.

Prichard's appeal was based on the allegation the district court judge committed error in allowing testimony during the trial by Judge William B Ardery of Paris, Ky.

It was brought out Prichard held a midnight conference with Judge Ardery in which the ballot-box-stuffing episode was discussed. His attorneys contended that Judge Ardery's testimony should have been barred because there was a client-lawyer relationship between them.

At the trial, Judge Ardery testified:

"Mr. Prichard told me that he and two other young men prepared the ballots here in issue and put them in the ballot boxes before the election began.

"Mr. Prichard was greatly disturbed both mentally and emotionally. His mind was not on the past. It was on the future, at what it might hold for him. He asked me if I had a suggestion which would help him."

Bourbon County election commissioners said they found 254 forged ballots in 11 precincts within three days.

KNOW YOUR WATERWAYS

Flood Control

Should our rivers flow down to the seas carrying away fertile top soil from countless upland acres and wreckage from flood desolation, rather than a large part of the nation's commerce? It is estimated that the Mississippi deposits more than 400,000,000 tons of fertile soil (silt) into the Gulf of Mexico every year, and the Columbia more than 100,000,000 tons into the Pacific. This tremendous loss of one of the nation's most valuable assets, its land, is ominous. Should up-country flood water be dumped on unprotected regions below? Overflows from as widely separated areas as Montana and New York State finally reach the Gulf through the Mississippi and its tributaries. No state can take care of its flood water within its own borders. Should the tremendous power in our rivers run wild, disrupting industry and transportation, destroying wealth rather than creating it? When unimproved and uncontrolled, rivers are idlers and destroyers; when controlled and improved, they are servants and producers.

Owen Lattimore's book about Asia NOW is

THE SITUATION IN ASIA

William L. Shirer said it "taught me more about the new situation in Asia and incidentally about the problems confronting American foreign policy than any book I have read in ages... Lattimore said some very sensible things about relations between Russia and the United States."

Edgar Snow called it "a thoughtful book ending with a bucketful of sound advice on how to get along with Asia—and hence with Europe and Russia."

Richard E. Lauterbach wrote: "Re-examination of his last book reveals that the author—and not U. S. policy makers—correctly called the turn of events in Korea, China, Japan, Indonesia and elsewhere. Now in THE SITUATION IN ASIA he sees our task as helping to change an Asia we are not strong enough to control into an Asia strong enough to refuse to be controlled by the Russians."

James P. Warburg thinks "Mr. Lattimore has performed an invaluable service for any American citizen."

Joseph C. Harsch said Mr. Lattimore's "estimate on the limitation of Russian power in China is the most encouraging thing I have read on the subject. I hope he is right."

Herbert Faulkner West thinks "THE SITUATION IN ASIA should be memorized by Congress."

Owen Lattimore's book about Asia's "heartland" is

PIVOT OF ASIA

"Full of sharp insights into the strange currents sweeping modern—and medieval—Asia, and of realistic judgments which only a McCarthy would call 'pro-Red.'"
—Lewis Gannett

"No strategic problem in Asia is more complex than this one, as a tangle of geographic, ethnic, historical and cultural interpenetrations, and no other Western writer could have given it the wide-ranging, intensely detailed, scholarly treatment that Owen Lattimore has in PIVOT OF ASIA."

'Hurts to Take the Money'

Commuter Dennis King Enjoying 'Walk-On' Role

By Herbert Kupferberg

NEW YORK (NYHT). — Every night at a quarter to 10, Dennis King shows up at the Royale Theater, doffs the trappings of a Long Island Railroad commuter and gets into the red, white and gold uniform of Gen. John Burgoyne. At 10:05 he walks into the last act of a 53-year-old play called "The Devil's Disciple." At 10:40 he is all finished and by 11 he is on his way home to Brookville, Long Island.

"It's a disgraceful way to make a living," he said with a wink after the show the other night, as he was getting out of Burgoyne's uniform and into the commuter's. "It hurts me to take the money."

Mr. King admits that his pain is considerably eased by the fact that his half-hour on the stage enables him to play a leading part in one of the most brilliant comedy sequences ever written—the ironical exchange of wit between the suave Britisher Burgoyne and the flamboyant, American, Dick Dudgeon. With Maurice Evans as his straightman and Bernard Shaw as his script writer, Mr. King says he is perfectly content to lead a short life and a merry one in the show.

"You know," said Mr. King, "Shaw used to tell his younger actors: 'If you're good, I'll let you play Burgoyne.' It's a very rare part indeed. You say the most remarkable things."

A Recipe for Fame

Here are some of the remarkable things Mr. King is called upon to say in "The Devil's Disciple":

"Martyrdom, sir, is what these people like; it is the only way in which a man can become famous without ability."

"I should never dream of hanging any gentleman by an American clock."

"Let me understand you clearly, madam. Do you mean that this gentleman is not your husband, or merely—I wish to put this with all delicacy—that you are not his wife?"

"The British soldier can stand up to everything except the British War Office."

Having played in such semimilitary vehicles as "The Vagabond King" and "The Three Musketeers," Mr. King qualifies as something of an expert on stage soldiers.

"Burgoyne was a real soldier," he said admiringly. "He was shot through the collar at Saratoga, you know. But he was a playwright, too. He wrote a play called 'The Heiress,' which ran 30 nights—very good for those days. And he was quite the gallant.

"The other day someone was telling me he had a habit of sending little gifts to women—'fair frails,' he called them. Well, he used to send them little gold mesh bags, to hold sweetmeats. This is what he wrote them: 'Since you are always ogling to catch my eye at the gaming clubs, I send these bags to catch them in.'"

As for the play itself, no less an authority than Bernard Shaw whimsically contends that "The Devil's Disciple" is a "threadbare popular melodrama" which appears to be a work of startling originality only because Bernard Shaw is the author.

"Critics, like other people," Shaw says in his preface, "see what they look for, not what is actually before them. In my plays they look for my legendary qualities and find originality and brilliancy in my most hackneyed claptraps. Were I to publish 'Buckstone's Wreck Ashore' as my latest comedy, it would be hailed as a masterpiece of perverse paradox and scintillating satire. Not, of course, by the really able critics—for example, you, my friend, now reading this sentence."

Mr. King agrees that "The Devil's Disciple," which contains such incidents as the reading of a will, a near-hanging and a last-minute reprieve, is a melodrama. "As a matter of fact," he said, "Burgoyne could be travestied. He could be made into a ridiculously comic figure. You have to play him carefully—with a little turn of the head or twist of the hand."

Melodrama—especially the kind with music—is no new thing to Dennis King, who is equally at home in operettas and plays. He says he is even thinking of tuning up his baritone voice for another musical show next year.

"I can still sing, you know," he remarked, reaching for his commuter's coat. "I do most of my singing around the house right now, but I can do it as well as anybody on Broadway—except Pinza, and I'm younger than him."

Baby Search Now Centers In the Plains

New York, April 4 (AP).—The search for a tiny, prematurely born baby snatched from an incubator in a New York hospital centered today in a hamlet known as The Plains in Fauquier County, Va.

The missing baby, Chaneta Holden, was 9 days old and weighed 2 pounds 11 ounces when she was found missing from a Lincoln Hospital incubator last Thursday night. Doctors said it was highly doubtful the baby could live outside the incubator.

Government Wins Fall Damage Suit

A Watergate concertgoer who trips over a rathole the authorities in the area don't know about can't collect damages from the Government, Judge David A. Pine ruled yesterday.

The District Court jurist made the ruling in dismissing a $2500 damage suit brought by Miss Dorothy Lee Lem, 30, a Columbia University student who said she was injured in a fall as she was leaving a concert at the Watergate July 22, 1947.

She claimed in her suit that she was injured when she fell near a walk in the park area near Lincoln Memorial.

Judge Pine said Miss Lem was a "licensee" in the park, being there under the permission of the authorities rather than being there for business purposes where the Government would benefit materially.

The jurist also agreed with Assistant United States Attorneys Ross O'Donoghue and Bruce G. Sundium that there was insufficient evidence that would show that the Government was guilty of negligence in caring for the park.

CHRYSLER'S BLIND SELFISHNESS CONTINUES TO BLOCK STRIKE SETTLEMENT

No Amount of Corporation Propaganda Can Change the Basic Facts Or Cover Up Chrysler's Refusal to Accept Its Responsibility

Chrysler has enjoyed the most profitable year in its history. It has piled up millions upon millions of dollars to set new records in profits—$213,170,000 before taxes; $132,200,000 after taxes; 34.4 per cent return on investment after taxes—more than $2,000 profit per worker.

Chrysler has just set aside out of these 1949 profits a $9,690,869 bonus "kitty" to be split up between a handful of already highly-paid officers, executives and supervisory employes. This $9,690,869 bonus "kitty" would pay more than half of the total annual cost of the pension and hospital-medical demands of the 89,000 Chrysler workers.

The Chrysler strike continues because the Chrysler Corporation, in its blind selfishness, still refuses to make the same economic concessions to its workers that have been made by its competitors.

Ford, Nash-Kelvinator, Kaiser-Frazer, Budd, Massey-Harris and many others have settled with the UAW-CIO for benefits to their workers equalling 10 cents an hour for pensions, medical-hospital programs and insurance.

All the pension payments negotiated with Chrysler competitors provide for the establishment of an actuarially sound Trust Fund into which the company makes payments to cover future service credits as earned and to pay up back service credits over a fixed period of time. This is the only way that pension benefits can be guaranteed. Chrysler refuses to establish this kind of an actuarially sound Pension Trust Fund for its workers. However, Chrysler Corporation executives who will receive as high as $25,200 a year in pension benefits, have their benefits guaranteed by an actuarially sound Pension Trust Fund.

Chrysler's phony "bank deposit" will not provide security for Chrysler workers since it does not create an equity for each Chrysler worker based upon time worked in the past and in the future as is done in the Pension Trust Funds established in contracts with Chrysler competitors.

CHRYSLER REJECTS SOUND PRINCIPLES ACCEPTED BY IT COMPETITORS

The five principles listed below are common to the agreements signed by the UAW-CIO with Chrysler competitors. These five principles represent the basic framework of a sound pension agreement. Chrysler, in its blind selfishness, continues to refuse to accept the basic principles agreed to by its competitors.

1. Establishment of a Trust Fund into which company payments are made on an actuarially sound basis to cover both past and future service credits. (Chrysler rejects this principle completely.)

2. Company payments into the Trust Fund on a "level cost" method of funding. "Level cost" method of funding means amortizing past service credits over a stipulated period of years and accumulation of funds to cover future service credits as earned. (Chrysler rejects this principle completely.)

3. Administration of the pension program by a Joint Board of Administration on which the Company and the Union have equal representation, with provision for an impartial chairman. (Chrysler, at the end of the 56th day of the strike, agreed to accept this principle partially.)

4. Selection by the Company of a Trustee—a legally qualified Bank or Trust Company—as custodian of the Pension Fund with the responsibility of investing the funds. (Chrysler accepts this principle since it is the corporation's own proposal and represents a concession by the Union.)

5. Payment by the Company of a minimum of 10 cents an hour to cover the cost of the Pension program and the Hospital-Medical program. (Chrysler offered to pay only 3 cents toward the 10-cent package before the strike started and did not change its position until the 56th day of the strike when the company increased its offer to 4 cents per hour for pensions, hospital-medical insurance benefits.)

While the above principles are common to all the agreements with Chrysler competitors, there are some variations between other parts of the agreements. The Union has proposed repeatedly that Chrysler accept the principles common to all the agreements and that we negotiate all those elements of the agreements which vary. Chrysler, in its blind selfishness, refuses to accept this sensible and practical approach.

HERE IS THE RECORD OF CHRYSLER'S UNWILLINGNESS TO RESOLVE THE DISPUTE:

1. On January 23, in a final effort to avert the strike, the Union proposed that the principles in the pension dispute be arbitrated while the plants continued to operate. The Union was prepared to prove the soundness and merit of its position before an impartial Board of Arbitration. The Chrysler Corporation rejected this sensible arbitration proposal which would have averted the strike.

2. On January 24, the Union wired Chrysler President K. T Keller asking him to participate directly in negotiations. Mr. Keller refused.

3. On March 3, the Union made a new proposal to end the strike, including a further arbitration proposal. Again the company rejected this sensible proposal to end the strike.

4. On March 16, the UAW-CIO asked outstanding religious, educational and civic leaders to meet and hear all the facts about the dispute. So that these community leaders might get both sides of the issues, the Union again asked Messrs. Keller, Weckler and Conder to be present and give the Company's side. Again they refused.

This record by Chrysler leaves only one possible conclusion—

The Chrysler Corporation cannot justify its position in this strike before any fair and impartial body, nor to the public, nor to its workers. It is crystal clear that Chrysler is determined to win its case—not on the basis of fairness, truth and equity—but through brute strength and arrogance backed by its fantastic 1949 profit of $213,000,000, plus its millions in cash reserve.

The UAW-CIO negotiated with the Chrysler Corporation for six months before the strike was called in an earnest effort to avert the strike. The UAW-CIO is prepared now to negotiate night and day for as long as is necessary to reach a fair and equitable settlement of the strike. The UAW-CIO has never asked for a recess or adjournment of negotiations since the strike started. Every recess, every delay in negotiations, has been at the request of either the Chrysler Corporation or of Federal and State mediators assigned to the dispute. If the Chrysler Corporation is prepared to negotiate around the clock, the UAW-CIO negotiating team is ready to meet on that basis for as many days as it takes to reach an agreement.

Chrysler's attempt to attribute to the Union other motives than the issues in the dispute is simply an attempt by the Corporation to shift responsibility for continuation of the strike because Chrysler cannot defend its position in terms of the real issues.

In a police state where democracy has been destroyed, industrial peace is possible without justice. But in a society of free men, industrial peace is possible only if it rests upon a foundation of economic and social justice. Chrysler's blind selfishness denies its workers justice, and so blocks the road to industrial peace. The Chrysler strike will be settled when blind selfishness gives way to reason. The strike will be settled when the Chrysler Corporation meets its responsibilities to its workers and to the nation.

THE STRIKE WILL BE SETTLED WHEN BLIND SELFISHNESS GIVES WAY TO REASON—WHEN THE CHRYSLER CORPORATION MEETS ITS RESPONSIBILITY TO ITS WORKERS AND TO THE NATION.

Pan American Petroleum Net Drops in Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co., Inc., which operates extensively in the Washington area, reported net income of $13,439,752 or $2.83 a share for 1949.

This compares with $14,281,296 or $3.01 a share in the previous year.

President D. J. Smith, in the annual report to stockholders, said that 1949 saw a return of the "buyers market" in petroleum products and a heightening of competition.

Gross sales of the corporation aggregated $269,750,650 last year, against $289,362,676 in 1948.

Pan American Petroleum is the parent firm of American Oil Co. which services more than 275 independent gas stations in the Metropolitan Washington area. The company also owns and operates 35 Lord Baltimore stations in this area, as well as a plant in Rosslyn, Va., which serves a water terminal and bulk distributing unit.

RECORD TRAFFIC: National Airlines in March chalked up an all-time record month for business handled at the National Airport, according to Manager Parke Wright. Number of passengers carried out of Washington showed an increase of 100 percent over March, 1949, and the gain in air freight out of Washington was even greater, he said yesterday. Entries into this city by National also nearly doubled.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: L. O. Braun has been appointed general sales manager of Southern Wholesalers Inc., Washington. Braun formerly was national sales manager of the home freezer division of Deep-freeze manufacturers . . . Frank M. Porter, veteran of three decades in the oil business, is the new president of American Petroleum Institute . . . Carl F. Unruh has been appointed director of purchasing of Ford Motor Co. . . . E. W. Berger has been named assistant sales manager of Kaiser-Frazer Corp.

Braun

NINETY-FIFTH YEAR: Mutual Fire Insurance Co. of D. C. in its ninety-fifth annual statement shows total assets of $383,418 at the end of 1949 and surplus of $338,135. Reelected as directors were Edgar Morris, L. Pierre Boeteler and W. H. A. Church. Boeteler, former president of the firm, was congratulated on attending his fifty-fifth consecutive annual meeting.

EXHIBIT: Latest developments in robot business aids will be displayed here for two days, starting Thursday at International Business Machine Corp.'s sales office, 1111 Connecticut ave. The exhibit, open to the public, will demonstrate the IBM line of electronic and electric accounting machines, proof machines, electric typewriters and time recording equipment.

ODD LOTS: Frigidaire division of General Motors announced 10 to 19 percent cuts in cash prices of window room air conditioning units . . . WWDC-FM (Transit Radio) reported a 96 percent increase in advertising during March compared with same 1949 month. Also, WWDC during first full month of increased power showed a 28.5 percent gain in business, compared with same 1949 period . . . Slick Airways, a certificated air freight line, has launched a triple-damage suit for $30 million against the three biggest domestic airlines, charging a conspiracy to drive Slick and other all-freight lines out of business.

EARNINGS: Aluminum Co. of America reported 1949 net income of $24,218,404 or $4.45 a share, compared with $39,969,145 or $7.67 in 1948. A long strike at nine of the firm's plants in the last quarter of 1949 was blamed for the earnings drop.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 4 (AP).—All deliveries of oats and two deliveries of corn, May and July, hit new seasonal highs at today's Board of Trade session. Wheat pushed upward around 3 cents at times, largely on unfavorable weather news.

The Government's weekly weather report said seeding of feed grains was being delayed because of too much moisture on one hand, and on the other, not enough moisture had developed in the dry-winter wheat section.

In addition to the weather there was some export news and the result was wheat closed 1¼ to 2¾ higher; corn was 1⅛ to 1⅝ higher; oats were 1⅛ to 2¼ higher; rye was 1⅜ to 1¾ higher; soybeans were 1¼ to 1⅝ higher, and lard was 2 cents higher to 3 cents a hundredweight lower.

New Potomac Span Put Off For 10 Years

Building of the twin span to the new Potomac Highway Bridge has been officially postponed for perhaps 10 years, it was learned yesterday.

Because they were about out of funds, the District Commissioners had decided several months ago to make the old bridge do a while longer if they could. The question was: Would it hold up?

Now they have been reassured on that point by a report given Highway Director J. N. Robertson by Engineer of Bridges Harry W. Howser.

Deputy Highway Director Samuel R. Harrison said Howser has reported the bridge should last for eight to 10 more years.

Harrison said Howser recommended minor repairs be made in the near future which would cost about $100,000.

2 Confirmed By Senate for Judgeships

The Senate yesterday unanimously confirmed the appointments of Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews as a District Court judge and Charles Fahy as a judge in the U. S. Courts of Appeals here.

Approval of the first woman named to the District bench here sailed through with three senatorial bows.

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee rose to tell his colleagues Mrs. Matthews is "one of America's greatest women."

And Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) noted Mrs. Judge Matthews is a native of Mississippi and said he is looking forward to the day "when she becomes a worthy member of the United States Supreme Court."

Both jurists have been serving under recess appointments.

Rep. Kearns Joins House District Body

Representative Carroll D. Kearns (R., Pa.) was appointed to the House District Committee yesterday.

He fills the vacancy created last year by the death of Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), who was one of 55 persons killed in the November 1, 1949, plane crash at Washington National Airport.

Kearns said he favors daylight saving time for Washington. He has not signed the House petition to take the Senate-approved Washington home rule bill out of the District Committee and put it to a House vote.

He said as a rule he does not sign discharge petitions; as for the home rule bill, he said he'd have to give it more study before any discussion.

tion plane was sent out to direct activities from the air. The Forestry Service utilized a radio car.

Meantime, yesterday appeared to be a day of brush fires throughout the Metropolitan Washington area.

Prince Georges County reported a total of 21, three of them—including the Beltsville fire—requiring more than a single alarm. The District reported 11. There were two fires in Alexandria; 14 in Arlington County; three in Fairfax County, and 20 in Montgomery County.

The largest of these—the Beltsville blaze excepted—was in Montgomery County, where a fire attacked 30 acres of wood and field east of Viers Mill rd., and about a mile east of the village of Viers Mill. Discovered about 2 p. m., it was quelled within two hours.

In the Beltsville fire, two volunteer firemen were injured. They were Robert F. Lefwer of Cherry lane, RD 1, Laurel, who suffered first-degree head burns, and James Beetle, 40, of Landover Hills, who was overcome by smoke.

The three University of Maryland students who had a narrow escape were Joseph Beattie, jr., 22; Richard Nedus, 21, and Robert Rausch, 22, all members of the College Park Volunteer Fire Department.

They were filling portable tanks at a creek near the Entymology Building on the Research Center grounds when flames jumped the bank.

For about 30 minutes, they reported, they were forced to lie in the creek while the fire brought down trees near them.

At another point along the front, the fire came within 500 yards of Montpelier Mansion on the estate of Breckinridge Long, former Assistant Secretary of State and once Ambassador to Italy.

Along the fire's fan-like course came reports of shacks burned and homes threatened. One structure destroyed was a radio shack owned by the Agriculture Department on the Research Center grounds.

At its peak, the blaze covered an area roughly bounded on the east by Muirkirk rd.; the Research Center on the south; the Bowie-Laurel rd. on the north, and a line about two miles east of Route 1, the Baltimore blvd., on the west.

FOR PRECIOUS CARGO...
There's no substitute for EASTERN'S EXPERIENCE

Every day hundreds of Mothers and Dads, with their children, fly Eastern. They fly Eastern because they have the utmost faith in the thoughtful, courteous treatment they receive from every man and woman of Eastern Air Lines.

They know their babies are serenely comfortable while traveling by air. The low, soothing tone of the powerful engines lulls them into restful sleep. The healthful routine, to which babies are accustomed, is undisturbed.

Mothers and Dads fly Eastern because of the special care given their little ones—such things as warming a bottle or preparing baby foods to mother's instructions.

Important too, babies fly as our special guests (one child in arms under two flies free of charge). Where precious cargo is concerned, there's no substitute for Eastern's experience.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., April 4.—How wrong can you be? George Schneiter, tournament bureau director of the PGA, was patiently explaining the other day that the top-ranking golf pros really weren't revolting against the full body of membership.

"We simply feel," said Schneiter, "that the tournament golfers should legislate for themselves and streamline their activities—not have nontournament golfers legislate for them."

POVICH

And what if the PGA should take a dim view of those objectives, Schneiter was asked.

"Oh, after they see the soundness of it, I think they'll see it our way."

But the next day, the PGA executive council and President Joe Novak didn't see eye-to-eye with Schneiter. In fact, Novak saw eye-to-neck with Schneiter and fired him.

The hotshot pros were getting their comeuppance from the boys in the back rooms at the country clubs, the nontournament pros who repair clubs, give lessons, have a drag with the members and earn a comfy if not spectacular living.

THE PRO tournament business was building up to that sort of thing, anyway, with revolt smoldering among the home pros rather than the headline guys. The touring stars who drag down the big purse money and make those fast bucks playing exhibitions, were reminded that they comprise only one percent of the PGA.

Whenever they wanted to, the home pros could wield the big stick, and enforce their own ideas of how tournaments should be run, even though they didn't compete. But as long as the headliners like Snead and Hogan and Demaret and Mangrum were parading under the PGA banner, they had best conform.

Not only could the lesser-known pros out-vote 'em, but they could strike back where it hurts most—in the pocketbook.

It's in the pro shops where the clubs and balls are sold, the source of the royalties to the big-name guys. Whenever the home pros wanted to put the ship on any special brand of manufactured equipment, they could make the big fellows scream.

THE TOURNAMENT golf business has been shot-through with politics ever since it became big business under the patient ministrations and spectacular promotions of Fred Corcoran, as tournament manager. Too many pros felt they were too big to be managed, and Corcoran was voted out of his job, the worst mistake they ever made.

When Corcoran took over, almost a dozen years back, the pros were playing for comparative peanuts, hankering for some club to post a $2500 in purse money. Corcoran, promotion-wise, humanized the game. And when he was paid off and dismissed, he had worked the purse money up to $10,000 per tourney. The pros won't look at anything less than that figure these days.

It was a willful band of little men in pro golf politics who barred Bobby Locke from the PGA tournament last year for the obvious reason that they were jealous of the South African's inroads on their tournament and exhibition gravy. With their action they denied to the United States golf fan the attraction he most wanted to see.

When Locke first came to the country he was an immediate sensation, and the galleries were swollen, and for a while even the United States pros were happy to have him around. But when he continued to win, to their amazement because of his unorthodox swing, they changed their happy tune to a bleat.

They ridiculed his old-fashioned stroke, with its looping back swing. Then, in order to bar him, they seized on the fact that he had failed to show for some American tournaments in which he had entered. Anything to get rid of the "furriner" who was cutting in on all that tournament and exhibition dough.

It was the pros who installed Schneiter as tournament director and then got him reelected a few months ago. He was their man, running the tournaments as they liked. Until the main body of membership suddenly discovered its muscles the other day, called for a new deal, and decided to bring the PGA back to the PGA.

PGA Makes Concessions, Plans Meeting With 'Rebels'

By Sterling Slappey

Augusta, Ga., April 4 (AP).—The executive committee of the PGA will meet here Monday with the dissident "eleven player board of governors" to attempt again to bring peace to professional golf.

Horton Smith, secretary of the PGA, said today proposals will be made to revise the tournament committee to give the traveling stars more representation in affairs which directly affect them.

George Schneiter, fired PGA tournament director, said tonight he will not "force an issue" by trying to attend the meeting Monday.

Schneiter is chairman of the "board," but Smith said he was not invited to the meeting. His inclusion would make 12 members.

When Schneiter learned he was not invited, he said: "I don't believe the other governors will attend without me—their chairman. That would be irregular.

"However, if they do, I will not force an issue. I may try to have a spokesman for myself in attendance."

Schneiter, a native of Ogden, Utah, who says he will return to the golfing circuit, added, "I don't want to deny that I overstepped my authority in arranging some of the summer circuit tournament affairs as the PGA charged.

"I was trying, and I intend to continue, to do everything to see that tournament sponsors are serviced properly."

Smith said the tournament committee could consist of the three national officers and four traveling pros. The pros would be elected by the golfers who follow the winter and summer circuits.

National officers are Smith, President Joe Novak and Treasurer Harry Moffitt.

"Governors" Include Big Names

Smith said the same set up was prepared for presentation last winter in Phoenix but that the appearance of the "board of governors," delayed it. He added that proposals to be made Monday are identical with the plan of last winter.

Smith said proposals also include the formation of a ways and means committee of seven active touring professionals. The touring stars will elect the seven. This body, Smith added, would listen to various grievances and make suggestions to the tournament committee.

The "board of governors" numbered 12 until Schneiter was fired in Chicago yesterday. The board now consists of many of golf's most illustrious playing names—Jimmy Demaret, Ben Hogan, Cary Middlecoff, Jimmy Thomson, Clayton Heafner, Sammy Snead, Johnny Palmer, Lawson Little, Bob Hamilton, Lloyd Mangrum and Toney Penna.

Howard Capps of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., the tournament director, will take over most of Schneiter's former duties as acting tournament bureau director.

The board was first formed during the Long Beach Open tournament in January. Its members said the group was designed to try to obtain more authority for traveling pros in the operation of tournaments.

Most of them denied that they ever had any intention of withdrawing from the PGA.

Fred Corcoran of Boston, who preceded Schneiter as tournament manager, still has a great following among the pros. Corcoran said he had been approached informally to return to the managership but that he was too busy with other commitments.

The new director will be named by the PGA executive committee and none of the touring golfers have any say under association rules on who he will be.

PGA Again Promises Columbus Top Tourney

Columbus, Ohio, April 4 (AP).—The Professional Golf Association today assured Columbus its 1950 tournament would be held here as scheduled June 20-27, with all the leading pros competing.

Tom Crane, PGA executive secretary, telephoned Mayor James A. Rhodes that his worries about the split between PGA officials and top-drawer golfers are unwarranted. The mayor said Crane told him "no further revolt appears in the wind at the moment."

NCAA Investigating Nats, Three of 'Em Reported to Be Pros—That's a Joke, Son

By Whitney Martin

TAMPA, FLA., April 4 (AP).—They are beginning to crack jokes about Bucky Harris' Washing Senators. Cruel, biting little jokes, some of them as flat as the "Who was that lady I saw you with last night?" variety.

Here are a couple we have heard which come to mind:

"I understand the National Collegiate Athletic Association is investigating Ray Scarborough, Eddie Robinson, Sam Dente and a couple of other Washington players has heard they are pros."

"With all that money they are giving away in Washington, it's a wonder they wouldn't buy the Senators some ball players, or maybe they are paying the club not to raise ball players."

It's always that way when a team is mired deeply in the muck of last place, and Bucky has been through it all before, although he's never had a team of his own finish that far down. He inherited this last-place club, and if he had to pay an inheritance tax he was gypped.

"Wherever we finish will be a moral victory, and I certainly don't want to or expect to finish last," he says.

So he sits there and watches and waits, a tight little smile on his weatherbeaten pan, a vague, sardonic twinkle in his wise eyes. Nobody is kidding Bucky Harris, least of all himself.

He knows how his Senators are rated, and, a tolerant man, he doesn't berate or condemn anyone for speaking or writing of them in a belittling manner. He knows that, human nature being what it is, the guy who stumbles and falls flat on his face is going to draw more laughs than sympathy. The Senators have been doing just that the last two or three years.

He tries to think and talk bravely of the future. You caught him thinking out loud as he gazed solemnly over the rather dejecting scene at Tinker Field in Orlando.

"After all," he mused, "the Yankees finished seventh in 1925. They must have had a little better ball club in 1925." The Yankees won the pennant in 1926.

"This isn't a bad ball club."

Triple Steal, 4 Blows by Evers Pace 6-4 Victory

St. Petersburg, April 4 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers continued to show their springtime superiority over the New York Yankees today when the Bombers, despite a three-run homer by Joe DiMaggio, bowed to the Bengals, 6-4.

It gave the Detroiters a clean sweep of the four-game series with the world champions.

The Yanks, leading 4-2 at the close of the seventh, had the lead wrenched away in the eighth when the Tigers hopped on Don Johnson for three runs. Three singles and a walk accounted for the first two runs. Then, after another pass filled the bases, George Kell scored on a triple steal in collaboration with Hoot Evers and Johnny Groth.

Evers paced the Tiger attack with four hits, one a seventh-inning homer off Lopat. DiMaggio's homer came in the third.

Two More Records Fall At Laurel

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., April 4.—Track records continue to be broken here like clay pigeons.

Two standards fell today and one of them was the daddy of them all—the mark for a mile and a sixteenth which has stood for 34 years.

Golden Bull is the new champion. In the colors of Mrs. S. M. Pistorio, the son of Bull Dog and Golden Rose at 109 pounds stepped around the much-used distance in a sensational 1:42 4-5, sending into discard the record of 1:43 2-5 registered by Boots, a 5-year-old carrying 116 pounds, on October 7, 1916.

Downs Aboard Golden Bull

The day's other mark-smashing came in the first race and was of little more than passing interest inasmuch as it was at four and a half furlongs a distance not in use here until this meeting.

Samuel Adelson's Tom Q raced through the stretch in wild and green fashion to hang up time of :53 3/5, clipping a fifth off the mark shared by B. Battery and Panade.

Golden Bull's great effort came in the Cabinet, the day's feature, and the 6-year-old was under a drive by Willie Downs, the meeting's leading rider, while winning by a length and a quarter.

Tom Q Pays $84.80

Taran, owned by S. W. Labrot, jr., was second and 3½ lengths in advance of Mrs. James McGee's Wide Margin, the favorite in the field of six.

Golden Bull was in front every inch of the way. In fact, the brown horse had a daylight margin over his closest opponent from start to finish. Fighting Gal and Taran were within striking distance at some stage of the trip, but the favored Wide Margin was never a dangerous factor.

The new record holder clicked off the fractions as follows: :23 4/5 for the suarter; :47 1-5 for the half; 1:11 4/5 for the three quarters and 1:36 3/5 for the mile.

Golden Bull failed in his first outing here, being in fifth position behind Magnet in the Capitol Handicap run over a deep, heavy track on opening day. He won two races during the winter at Hialeah while in $12,000 claiming company.

Tom Q., not only turned in record time in the first race, but he caused to be displayed an $84.80 individual mutuel and started a daily double that paid $744.80 on the "Woolworth" combination of 5 and 10. Mrs. H. S. Mitchell's Willis E was the second race winner at a $45.20 mutuel.

Hoyas Lose Opener to Penn, 4 to 3

Georgetown University opened its baseball season on a sour note, losing, 4-3, to Penn yesterday at the Medical Field.

The Hoyas, trailing 4-2 going into the last of the ninth, rallied but fell short. Johnnie Moskal doubled to score Frank Alagia and move Dick Falvey to third. However, Frank Mattingly and Lou Surman couldn't get the ball out of the infield to produce the tying run.

$1000 Reward Offered in NBA Telegram Hoax

New York, April 4 (AP).—The National Basketball Association today offered a $1000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the persons who sent the phony telegram to Referee Arnold Heft.

In making the offer, Maurice Podoloff, president of the NBA, pointed out that since the wire crossed State lines the deed was a Federal offense.

Heft, of Washington, D. C., didn't show up for a refereeing job in Syracuse Sunday because of the telegram advising him the assignment was canceled.

Walcott Tells Of Title Hopes

Jersey Joe Walcott, three-time unsuccessful challenger, vowed here yesterday that he still will win the world's heavyweight crown.

Walcott was one of the principal speakers at Howard University's fifth boxing clinic—its most successful—with 2200 in attendance.

Appropriately, Walcott's speech was entitled "Struggles of a Boxer." The veteran Jersey Joe said he thinks he still has time to wind up on top; that the urge never has deserted him in his up-and-down ring career.

Harry Markson, general manager of International Boxing Club, predicted that boxing is on the verge of a tremendous postwar boom because of a wealth of new and better talent.

Other speakers included Barney Ross, former world's lightweight and welterweight champ; Nat Fleischer, publisher of Ring magazine; and Lester Bromberg, New York boxing writer.

Fleischer, outlining the history of boxing, recalled that Presidents Jefferson, Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt engaged in the manly art.

The clinic was concluded with a dinner at which the guests of honor were presented with scrolls and medals by Howard University.

Navy Settles For Tie When Rally Fizzles

Annapolis, Md., April 4 (AP)—Navy and Vermont played a 4-4 baseball tie in a game called at the end of eight innings because of darkness.

Vermont's Bill Grant knotted the count in the eighth by driving in Don Hebsch with a timely single, and Navy failed to score after loading the bases in its half of the same inning.

Wake Forest's 'Ironman' Hurler Beats N. C. State

Raleigh, N. C., April 4 (AP).—A mechanical pitcher that does batting-practice duty for Wake Forest pitched an 8-0 victory for the Deacons over North Carolina State College today in an exhibition baseball game.

While letting the Wolfpack down with three hits, the iron-armed monster, which did the hurling for both sides, gave its own teammates 11 hits, including three home runs.

The game was run off as an otherwise regulation affair, with umpires on hand to make the calls on the machine pitcher. Each team stationed a hurler near the device to do the fielding. About 600 fans turned out for the show.

The mechanical hurler was charged with seven walks—two for the Deacons and five for the Wolfpack—and one wild pitch. It struck out one State player.

Harris Sure Nats Will Hit

Harris declares he's convinced the Nats will hit. "That isn't one of my worries. There isn't a weak hitter in our infield or outfield. If Irv Noren doesn't make it in a big way, I'll miss my guess. And we will rattle the fences and hit the ball out of the lot."

He thinks he has a better bench, too, then a couple of the clubs that are supposed to win the pennant. "I'd say we're protected in every position. Unlike last year, I can bring Noren in to play first base any day that Eddie Robinson is hurt, and little George Genovese will do a great job of it at either second, short or third.

"Last year Joe Kuhel was in foul shape when it came to infield replacement. I'm getting a better break that way."

Nagy's Pitching Is Pleasing

But his pitching, which has been summed up in three words—a horrible thought—continues to perturb Harris. He doesn't like the fact that Ray Scarborough has been soundly pasted in all of his last three outings; he's disturbed about Sid Hudson's sore back; he's wondering when, and if, young Dick Weik will ever find control, and he's completely shy of solid starters.

"I'm trying to take comfort out of a couple of things, though," he says. "I tell myself that Scarborough is an old head and isn't bearing down in the spring; and that Steve Nagy will be a help to us."

Nagy's first outing the other day after five weeks of conditioning was, indeed, a pleasing sight to Harris. He didn't allow Louisville we'd finish fourth or better.

But Pitching—Ouch!

Harris Is Downright Expansive Over Nats' Hitting, Reserves

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., April 4.—Bucky Harris visions the Nats as a very good ball team—on the days when they can come up with some tolerable pitching. About those other days, which could be too numerous, Harris is properly alarmed.

"I don't want to delude myself," said Harris today. "Our pitching isn't good. And you could call that an understatement. It's a crying shame, because the rest of the club deserves better pitching."

It was about the rest of his team that Harris waxes somewhat enthusiastic, even expansive. "It has a lot of merit," he said. "It's as capable as some of those teams that are supposed to finish in the first division. Give me some pitching to go with it, and I promise

Diz 'Commutates' for $20,000

New York, April 4 (AP).—"I never could beat them Yankees, so I joined them."

Ole Dizzy Dean was talking. The onetime pitching great of the St. Louis Cardinals had signed to telecast the Yankees' baseball games this summer and now he was meeting the press.

Dizzy said he was 39 and he looked very fit indeed. A little portlier than when he pitched and his hair was gray.

He signed a make-believe contract for the benefit of photographers and then turned to the reporters with a grin.

"I wasn't no holdout this time."

Earlier Dean had been talking with reporters about his annual salary disputes with the Cards when he used to pitch for them.

No figures were announced but Diz mentioned several weeks ago in Texas that he was going to get $20,000 for his Yankee programs.

He's going to do a daily program before and after Yankee home games and every other day he's going to do the commentary on the play by play.

Only Diz calls it "commutating."

"They ain't no use in say in a batter is coming to the plate," said Diz, "shucks everyone can see that. I'll have to commutate more."

He has no intention of changing his way of speaking which proved so successful in 11 years of radio and TV work in St. Louis.

"I'll be as I was in Arkansas, I promise you that," added Diz who said he was born in Lucas, Ark. "When a guy sluds into second base, he sluds that's all. Ain't nothin' wrong with that, is there?"

No, sir! Not for $20,000 per there ain't.

Dan Wagner Hurls 1-Hitter for Terps

Dan Wagner pitched a one-hit shutout against Delaware University yesterday and Maryland marked up its third win in four games, 10-0, at College Park.

Wagner who pitched three hitless innings against Rutgers last week thus run his string of shutout innings to 12. The only hit he allowed was a short pop off the bat of the opposing pitcher, Doc Green, which dropped just past second base in the third inning. He struck out 14 in his superlative performance.

The Maryland hitting star was Ed Cresenze who pounded out three hits in four trips. His big blow being a homer with none on in the eighth. This marks the third straight game that Cresenze has collected three hits.

any kind of a run, and only three hits in four innings.

"It wasn't the fact that Nagy shut 'em out," said Harris, "it was a relief to see a fellow who knows how to pitch give us a workmanlike job out there. You noticed he didn't walk anybody. You have to be a manager to realize what a comfort it is to see one of his pitchers take full charge like Nagy did."

Harris has given up hope that any of his rookie pitchers will do him any good. . . . Big Earl Davis will be retained, however, because the Nats have no more options left in his case. The husky left-hander needs more seasoning in the minors but the Nats will lose title to him if they try to send him out again. . . . Outfielder Roberto Ortiz will join the Nats from Cuba in a couple of days; but if he doesn't show up, it will be all right with Harris, who is out of patience with the big fellow and doubts he can break into the outfield, anyway. . . . Big Eddie Robinson's .448 spring batting average is in contrast to his poor start last year. A week after the season started, the Nats' top hitter of 1949 actually was benched in Boston because he couldn't buy a hit.

It's That New Rule—Coast League Calls 44 Balks in a Week

San Francisco, April 4 (U.P.). The newly enforced "hesitation" rule for pitchers is here to stay—whether the players like it or not—Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler said today.

After learning that 44 balks were called on pitchers during the first week in the Pacific Coast League campaign, compared with a total of 17 for the whole of 1949, Chandler said:

"The rule is in the books and we are going to enforce it."

The new rule requires the pitcher to stop for a full second before delivering the ball.

he continued, as if trying to convince himself that it was just a victim of circumstances. "I think it will hit fairly well, and if Gil Coan and Sam Mele and Irv Noren come through, I've got my young outfield for the future."

The trim little guy might be able to lift the club through sheer power of will. After all, he's done such things all his life, often battling through against terrific odds.

As a 140-pound pro basketball player in the rough and tough days when pro basketball was a game to be avoided if you wished to keep your teeth and placed more than a two-bit value on your anatomy . . . as a slight, but rubber-tough second baseman making up in dash and sheer grit what he lacked in size . . . as a manager, sometimes riding high as he did with the Senators and Yankes and at other times struggling with inept teams—Bucky always had one thing in his favor, and that was tenacity.

When things look dark now he can look back to 1940 when the outlook was no less dismal. In fact, Bucky will tell you his current club definitely is better than the 1940 club which somehow he managed to coax into seventh pla ce.

The immediate future is indistinct even to him. A stranger approached him in the dugout, greeting him with "you look sort of at home in that suit."

"I'll tell you more about it July 4," Bucky answered cryptically.

Hill Prince, Virginia Derby Hope, Meets Guillotine Today

Bill Bennings...

Dear Folks— AT LAUREL. Isn't it true that, under the present set-up, the move to abandon Pimlico in favor of Laurel has been dropped and that some extensive building will soon get underway at the Baltimore plant? Secretary Leeds Riley was here beating the publicity guns for Charles Town which reopens Saturday while Don Reed was doing the same job for Havre de Grace. Fans were wondering why Jockey Richard Williams didn't claim a foul after the first race when it appeared that the winner, Tom Q., foulded Narrator in the stretch. Maybe it was a smart move by Williams. Narrator gets second money, remains a maiden and is eligible for another non-winner's event. Anyway, few objections coming from 2-year-old races are sustained. Seel you on the rail. BILL.

Arcaro Rides Chenery Colt At Jamaica

By John Chandler

New York, April 4 (AP).—Hill Prince and Guillotine, two of the leading Eastern candidates for the Kentucky Derby, head a small field of eight 3-year-old colts scheduled to tangle tomorrow in the $20,000-added Experimental Free Handicap at Jamaica.

The six-furlong event is the first major Eastern test for Derby horses, and will serve to give a line on some of the candidates which didn't race during the winter.

This will be the first start of the season for Hill Prince, the bobtailed Virginia colt owned by C. T. Chenery. Guillotine, the Greentree Stable's chief Derby hope, won an overnight race last Saturday.

Four of the other six in this Experimental No. 2 have been nominated for the Derby, May 6, at Churchill Downs. They are the James Cox Brady pair of Casemate and Starecase, Hal Price Headley's Lotowhite, and the California challenger, Sturdy One, from the stable of Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Phelps. The field is completed with Mrs. Andy Schuttinger's Ferd and Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Foreign Affair.

Futurity Winner

Since their paths never crossed as 2-year-olds, this will be the first meeting between Hill Prince and Guillotine. Hill Prince wound up his juvenile year by winning the Cowdin Stakes in track record time at Aqueduct. A few weeks later Guillotine captured the rich Belmont Futurity.

Hill Prince is to be ridden tomorrow, and in all of his Derby preps, by Eddie Arcaro. The son of Princequillo will have high weight of 124 pounds.

Toronto Teddy Atkinson will be aboard Guillotine, who was assigned 122 pounds by Handicapper John Campbell. Campbell's weights are regarded as a yardstick measuring the horses' possibilities based on their 2-year-old campaign.

It had been hoped that King Ranch's Middleground, top-weighted for the Experimental at 126 pounds, would start tomorrow. But Trainer Max Hirsch said he was in no hurry. Middleground hasn't raced since winning the Hopeful last August.

Stanlee Heads Turner's Card

Gene "The Body" Stanlee, the Mr. America of wrestling, heads the program at Turner's arena tonight which also includes a midget novelty bout and a six-man team match.

Stanlee faces Tony Morelli in a 60-minute time limit bout.

The midgets are Pee Wee James, of France, and Tom Thumb of England. James weighs 90 pounds and stands 44 inches tall while Tom Thumb scales 92 pounds and 45 inches. The team match has Ace Freeman, Dutch Schweigert and Ivan Kamaroff against Miguel Torres, Irish Jack Kelly and Jim Austeri.

Ball Games Sought

Seven New Members Named to President's Loyalty Review Board

Seven new members have been appointed to the President's Loyalty Review Board. They are:

Harry W. Blair, a prominent Washington attorney, who has been serving as a member of the Civil Service Commission's Fourth Regional Loyalty Board.

Eliot Wadsworth, formerly of Boston, and now retired as a partner of Stone & Webster, an engineering firm. He served as an Assistant Treasury Secretary from 1921 to 1925. He is on the board of several corporations.

Catharine Pratt Field, former president, American Association of University Women. Her husband is Henry P. Field, vice president of the Hawaiian Electric Co.

Marshall B. Henshaw, a Honolulu attorney and banker, who was graduated from Stanford in 1912.

Frank Elbert Midkiff, an educator and author, also from Honolulu.

Henry Reining, jr., professor of public administration and political science at the University of Southern California. He was with the National Institute of Public Affairs here for many years.

Gregg Manner Sinclair, president of the University of Hawaii since 1942.

The next step up the Government ladder for Frank Pace will be Undersecretary of Defense. Pace was tapped to succeed Steve Early as Defense Undersecretary, but the Pullman Co., agreed to extend Early's leave of absence and Pace was persuaded to take the Army Secretaryship. He is certain to be offered the job when Early does leave it.

The National Bureau of Standards is undergoing an internal reorganization. The first step in the process is the appointment of Nicholas Gollovin as executive assistant to the director. Gollovin will take over gradually most of the agency's administrative functions. In addition, several of the present administrative people will be either replaced or superseded.

The House Appropriations Committee, in a recent report, was critical of Standards' administrative operaions. It forced the shakeup.

At State, there's speculation that Undersecretary for Administration Jack Peurifoy is slated for a top diplomatic post, perhaps as Ambassador to Canada.

At Interior, its long-vacant job of Undersecretary has been turned down by Representative Henry Jackson (D., Wash.). Jackson is a member of the House Appropriations Committee and one of the abler members of the House. Jackson flatly refused to talk seriously with Secretary Oscar Chapman about the job.

Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) has come up with a novel way of selecting postmasters. He proposes: (1) that the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee name the three top applicants for any postmaster job, and (2) that the patrons of that particular office elect the postmaster from the three preferred candidates.

JOBS: They are becoming harder to find in Government. The competition is stiffer, too. Here's concrete evidence:

Layoff notices given 129 Commerce employes are going into effect this week. Ninety of these workers were either veterans with permanent status or long-service career employes with up to 25 years of service behind them.

Department officials were reasonably sure a month ago that they could find other jobs for the 90 career workers. Up to now, however, jobs have been located for less than 30 despite a thorough canvass of the employment situation throughout Federal agencies here. Facing unemployment are a score of needy persons who have heart-breaking stories.

Incidentally, 29 employes appealed their layoffs to Civil Service which has upheld the department in all of them.

Gregg to Talk on Gorge

An illustrated lecture, "Nature Exploration in the Potomac Gorge," will be presented by the National Capital Parks in the Interior Department Auditorium, 18th and C sts. nw., at 8 p. m. Thursday. The speaker will be Park Naturalist Raymond Gregg.

Home Rule Backers Get First Real Opposition

40 More Names Still Needed for Petition to Get Vote on Measure

Washington home rule supporters are now "hitting the bedrock of opposition," Tilford Dudley, assistant director of the CIO Political Action Committee, said yesterday.

Speaking at a "Just Around the Corner" luncheon, sponsored by Home Rule Headquarters, Dudley told about 40 active home rule workers history of discharge petitions shows that securing signatures always is "the toughest" from the 175 to the 210 mark.

With 178 names on the Kennedy petition, local suffrage groups are driving for the necessary 42 more signatures to bring the Senate-passed measure to a House vote.

"The opposition is worried today, and have their workers, too, out in the field," Dudley told the Carlyle Hotel meeting. "But once you get up to 210 signatures (218 are required), it will be a pushover, just a coast home."

Many Congressmen, he said, want to get on the "credit roll" the last minute if they see the petition will be successful.

Following the luncheon, several citizen group spokesmen went to the Capitol to urge Representatives who have not already signed to do so.

Among the pro-home rule groups represented at yesterday's meeting were: the District League of Women Voters, Federation of Citizens Associations, Federation of Civic Associations, the CIO, Americans for Democratic Action, Young Republicans of the District, Young Democrats of Washington, the Washington Home Rule Committee, The American University Women, the Industrial Union Council and the Sons of the American Revolution.

Culver B. Chamberlain, president of the Central Suffrage Conference, presided.

Gunman Robs Liquor Store and Flees With $325

A lone gunman held up the Arcade Liquor Shoppe at 3d and K sts. ne. last night and escaped with approximately $325 in cash.

Owner Harry Wallerstein, 54, described the holdup man as about 5 feet 10 inches tall, Negro, about 30 to 35 years old, and wearing a gray jacket and black pants.

Wallerstein said the gunman entered at 6:18 p. m., pulled out a dark automatic and forced the owner and an employe, Arthur Henry, 44, to the floor in the rear of the store. Wallerstein said he chased the bandit for a third of a block and lost him down an alley.

Easter Talks Series To Begin Here Today

Dr. J. Russell Gardner of Kankakee, Ill., will give a series of Easter talks beginning today at the First Church of the Nazarene, 7th and A sts. ne.

Police Arrest Man They Say Is 5th Holdup Gang Member

Troubles multiplied yesterday for Bryant O. Pearce, 34, former Government employe, who in the past eight months has been charged with robbery and two counts of swindling.

This time the charge is armed holdup. He is said by police to be one of five members of a gang that held up a night clerk at the Plaza Hotel on March 11 and a Southwest Washington druggist on March 15.

Pearce, who lists his address as 5119 S st. se., was arrested Monday afternoon at the corner of 5th and E sts. nw. by Lieut. Edgar E. Scott, head of the robbery squad, and Lieut. George E. Cooper, also of the robbery squad.

At the time, Pearce was accompanied by his bondsman, James Conroy, and was on his way to the courthouse of District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough for sentencing in a larceny after trust case.

The judge postponed sentencing until April 17.

Less than three months ago, Pearce was acquitted on a charge of swindling Theodore J. (Little Joe) Scheve, District gambler of $3000 in a business deal. He also was acquitted recently on a robbery charge.

With his arrest, police said yesterday they have completed their roundup of the gang that pulled two quick holdups here in March.

Suspects previously arrested were Augustine F. Lawrence, 26, of 1811 D st. se.; Diane Gale Daniel, 24, of 907 13th st. nw.; Anthony T. Di Pietro, 34, of 3507 Varnum st., Mount Rainier, Md., and Leon J. Cefaratti, 26, of 1813 A st. se.

According to police, Pearce wielded a blackjack on Martin Silver, 48, a druggist, when Silver was held up for $38 in cash and $350 in checks near his store at 4141 Wheeler rd. se.

Police say Pearce and Lawrence worked together on this job and that again it was the woman and Di Pietro who waited in the nearby getaway car.

All five appeared yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and he continued the cases until Thursday.

Violence Threat Cited

Pearce's checkered record shows that he was indicted last August on charges of swindling two persons of more than $3500 on the promise he could facilitate the sale of surplus property.

According to the Civil Service Commission, he has at various times worked for the War Department, the War Assets Administration, the Department of Agriculture, and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Assistant United States Attorney Andrew Howard told Commissioner Lawrence there had been a threat of violence to the Daniel woman by the other defendants before they were brought up from the cell block to the Commissioner's hearing room.

Detectives have said it was partly through her testimony that some of the members of the gang were arrested.

Commissioner Lawrence continued the same bond on the four previously arrested—$30,000 on Lawrence, $20,000 on Di Pietro, $15,000 on Cefaratti and $4000 on the woman. He set bond at $15,000 for Pearce.

A swindle charge was brought by Michael J. Reidy, of 718 Richmond ave., Silver Spring, Md., who said Pearce promised to get him a Cadillac seized from the Japanese. He told police he paid Pearce $553.50 for the car but never received it.

Pearce pleaded guilty to this charge and was to have been sentenced Monday by Judge Goldsborough.

They were held in $10,000 bond each.

Quiz of Four in Rape Attempt May Lead to Shooting Solution

Police last night were questioning four men in connection with the robbery and attempted rape early yesterday of Miss Pauline Hardy, 44, at her restaurant, 632 3d st. sw.

Detectives hoped this new case might lead to the two gunmen who kidnaped a cab driver, pulled an $11 holdup, then shot the hacker and threw him from the cab the night of March 27.

Only three men were involved in the robbery and attempted attack on Miss Hardy, who lives at 3223 11th st. nw. When they sped away in their car, a detective cruiser pursued them.

Marked by Gunfire

The chase was marked by an exhange of gunfire between the three men and Detectives Norman Gray and John W. Hayes of the safe squad, who were in the cruiser.

Near 1st and K sts. se., the men slowed their car, leaped out and escaped. The car came to rest against a tree. Gray and Hayes found three of their shots had lodged in the car.

The car had not been reported stolen. Its owner told police it had been taken by friends. As a result of this lead, detectives brought in four men for questioning.

Fought Off Attackers

Miss Hardy told police the three Negroes had entered the restaurant and after she served them water complained it wasn't cold enough. When she returned to the kitchen, she said, one of the three seized her, took $40 from her apron pocket, then dragged her to a back yard shed and tried to rape her. She fought off his attempts, she said, and he fled.

The case revived the 8-day-old shooting of Leslie Smith, 31, of 128 F st. nw., who was shot in the back by two gunmen who had commandeered his cab and used it in a holdup. Smith is recovering in Casualty Hospital.

His cab was later found abandoned in front of the restaurant where last night's crime took place. Police said the caliber of the bullets used on Smith and those fired by the escaping men last night were the same.

Dr. Zappala Made Assistant Chief Of Alcoholic Clinic

The District Commissioners yesterday named Dr. Anthony Zappala, St. Elizabeths Hospital psychiatrist, to the $7600-a-year job as assistant director of the District's Alcoholic Clinic.

Leopold E. Wexberg, clinic director, said the only other vacancy in the staff, that of part time psychiatrist, will be filled July 1.

Zappala, 31, is a graduate of the Georgetown University Medical School. He lives at 9518 Seminole st., Silver Spring, Md.

Myers' Body All Bloodied, Witness Says

Defendant's State Told in Abortion Prosecution Windup By Deputy Coroner

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The Government rested yesterday in the trial of Ralph W. Myers, 44-year-old Arlington window shade salesman, charged in the abortion death of Nina Jean Campbell January 4.

The last of 30 prosecution witnesses included two FBI chemists, Richard M. Rosenberg, deputy coroner, and neighbors of Ruth Childs, nurse and Myers' girl friend, in whose apartment at 1321 Fairmont st. nw., Mrs. Campbell's battered body was found.

Rosenberg testified he had examined Myers January 5, and found blood on his chest, hands, forearms, lower body, underclothes and socks.

Myers' Story of Blood

The deputy coroner said Myers gave permission for the examination.

"He (Myers) was asked if there was any reason for blood on his person, and he said he had picked up the dead girl's head and it was bloody, and he had blood on his hands and fingers," Dr. Rosenberg testified. "But he said he had not bled himself, and he had no other cause to have blood on his person."

Edwin R. Donaldson, FBI agent, testified that both Mrs. Campbell and Myers had blood type A and said that blood type A was present on 10 of the 20 Government exhibits.

Four neighbors of Miss Childs gave conflicting reports of disturbances at the Fairmont st., address on the night of January 4-5.

Mrs. Mary Bloyd and Miss Emily Hankla both described themselves as "heavy sleepers" and said they heard no unusual noises on the night in question.

Banging and Knocking

Miss Ellen Lemly said she was a "light sleeper" and she heard a "lot of knocking and a little more banging." She testified she peeked out her door at one point and saw a man sitting on the floor "near 2 in the morning." It has been testified that Myers was squatting in the hallway at approximately that time.

Mrs. Edith L. Dunlop described herself as a "medium sleeper." She said she was awakened at 3 a. m., January 5, "by heavy pounding on the door (of Miss Childs' apartment) for about 15 or 20 minutes and then what I thought was furniture being thrown around about 20 minutes later."

At a bench conference immediately after the Government rested its case, Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin asked Judge F. Dickinson Letts to direct a verdict of acquittal for Myers "on the grounds that the evidence was not sufficient to warrant proceeding further."

The motion was denied.

'Voice of America' Topic

Charles M. Hulten, general manager of the State Department's Information and Education Program, will discuss the Voice of America at a luncheon meeting of the Syracuse University Alumni Chapter of Washington today. The luncheon is at 12:30 p. m. at the Good Earth Restaurant, 1609 K st. nw.

Fast Time Margin Nearly 3-1 With Counts Almost Complete

Daylight saving time was nearly a 3 to 1 victor yesterday as the District's poll on fast time was—for all practical and statistical purposes—over at last.

By midnight, precinct policemen had tabulated at least 108 000 ballots. An unofficial, breakdown showed:

For—71,000.
Against—25,000.
Don't Care—12,000.

The figures came close to being conclusive inasmuch as some precincts reported returns of only 60 and 80 percent of the ballots they sent out.

Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said yesterday he didn't expect more than 125,000 or 150,000 back of the 200,000 slips printed by orders of the District Commissioners.

The Commissioners' office reported that the ballots cost between $150 and $200—not counting, of course, police man-hours spent on the project.

In some precincts last night, patrol cars were still picking up stray bunches of ballots. In others—notably the Fourteenth Precinct—crews on the 4 p. m. to midnight shift were counting whenever they had a spare minute.

A few harried precincts—due to get even more harried—planned to complete tabulations some time this morning.

The ballots and tabulations are due to be submitted to Superintendent Barrett today. Barrett yesterday said he "hopes to give" the results to the Commissioners Thursday.

Precinct by precinct, these were last night's reports, listing the "for" count first, "against" second, and "don't care" last:

No. 1—No report; No. 2—6473, 2351, and 1607; No. 3—6210, 2036, and 721; No. 4—1075, 700, and 500; No. 5—4800, 1700, and 966; No. 6—Between 5000 and 6000 collected, showing 3 to 1 "in favor;" No. 7—5546, 1227, and 676; No. 8—7032, 2772, and 599; No. 9—6826, 2963, and 1775; No. 10—10,000, 3000, and 1500 (approximate figures available only); No. 11—3500, 800, and 500; No. 12—6968, 2582, and 1046; No. 13—7470, 3198, and 1259; No. 14—5192, 1803, and 1006.

Young to Investigate Traffic Jams Caused by Painting Lanes

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, said yesterday he will investigate traffic jams caused by painting of street lanes on Connecticut ave.

Young told a reporter he will "look into all aspects" of the problem, which was pointed up by Post Reporter Bill Gold in his column on Monday.

The Engineer Commissioner said he had not received a copy of a reply from George E. Keneipp, director of Vehicles and Traffic, to Gold's suggestions for remedial action. Keneipp said one was on the way.

Gold had complained it took him 15 minutes to drive one block on Connecticut near Porter st. nw., because "both sides" of the avenue had been blocked off simultaneously to protect the lines of wet paint.

"We do not block either side entirely," Keneipp replied, as citizens objected to traffic snarls yesterday at Cathedral and Connecticut aves.

"At least one lane is left open in both directions," he added in his letter.

As for doing the job at night, as was suggested, Keneipp wrote: "Try it sometime and see how long it takes the paint to dry on a night with a lot of dew around."

The department is "far behind in this work" because of delays in delivery of paint, Keneipp said.

As for a suggestion that a policeman go along with painting crews to direct traffic, the traffic director made no comment in his letter.

Young said he would check into that phase, too.

Crosses of Lights to Burn In Buildings for Good Friday

Crosses of lights will burn in 19 public buildings from sundown Thursday until the dawn of Good Friday.

They are formed by leaving on lights in offices so that they show through in the form of a cross on the front of the darkened building. Arrangements for the display were made by the Committee for the Three Hours Observance of Good Friday.

They will be in the following buildings: Machinist Building, 930 k st. nw.; YMCA, 17th and G sts. nw.; YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.; American Federation of Labor, 901 Massachusetts ave. nw.; Potomac Electric Power Co., 10th and E sts. nw.; Reconstruction Finance Corp., 811 Vermont ave. nw.; Knights of Columbus, 918 10th st. nw., and 16th and R sts. nw.; Gas Light Co., 11th and H sts. nw.; Dupont Circle Bldg., 1337 21st st. nw.; Municipal Building, 300 Indiana ave. nw.

Also, Standard Oil Co., 261 Constitution ave. nw.; District Bldg., Pennsylvania ave. between 13½ and 14th sts. nw.; Acacia Mutual Life Insurance bldg., 51 Louisiana ave. nw.; American Security & Trust, 15th st.; and Pennsylvania ave. nw.; Washington Loan & Trust, 9th and F sts. nw.; Peoples Life Insurance bldg., 15th st. and New York ave. nw., and Immaculate Conception Church, 8th and N sts. nw.

6 Injured in Bus-Auto Collision

Six persons suffered minor injuries yesterday about 5 p. m. when a Trailways bus, bound from Centerville, Va., to Washington, collided with a car on Route 211, about seven miles west of Centerville.

Those treated at Arlington Hospital were: Mrs. Lacy Ramsey, 43, of 3023 13th st. nw. Charles Pates, 76, of 2403 Pennsylvania ave. nw.; Mrs. Elsie Ryals, 39, of 1908 Fillmore st. nw.; Mrs. Addie Simpson, 69, of Baltimore; and Ciro Marion, 65, and his wife Grace, 60, both of Mount Airy, N. C.

A 79-year-old Arlington man was in critical condition yesterday at Arlington Hospital with a fractured leg and head injuries received in an auto accident Monday night.

He is George Ritchie, of 2007 S. Glebe rd., Arlington who was struck by a car as he walked near his home at the intersection of 20th st. and S. Glebe rd. Police said the drive of the car was Harvey William Fox, 18, of 2706 S. 16th st., Arlington. He was not charged.

Contractors Hope to Fix Dupont Area For Easter

Workers Rushing Paving to Clear Way For Parade Planned By Merchants' Group

Contractors are moving at top speed to restore the Dupont Circle area for the Easter Parade Sunday. With good weather they hope to do better than promised.

Workmen are concentrating on surface construction now to make way for the parade. But J. N. Robertson, director of highways for the District, said he expects the underpass will open to traffic April 25.

This was the construction picture yesterday as explained by John J Hartke, the District's resident engineer on the job:

North of the circle concrete has been poured on all surface roadways. Blacktop surface will be laid before Sunday. Only work left to be done there is surfacing underground approaches to the underpass.

South of the circle the underpass approach has been excavated and walled up. Concrete was poured yesterday afternoon on the last surface portion of Connecticut ave. leading into the circle. It will be blacktopped this week.

On the circle itself workmen yesterday were busy burning trash and leveling piles of dirt. Concrete has been poured on the road around the circle except on the south side.

It was this strip—where the tunnel crosses the circle road—that highway officials feared would not be finished by Sunday. They had said it might be necessary to lay a temporary surface for Sunday and then replace it. Hartke now thinks this can be concreted Friday if good weather continues.

Hartke said John McShain, Inc., main contractor, has added men and worked overtime—until 1:30 a. m. one night—to finish in time. Overtime pay comes out of McShain's pocket, highway officials said.

Partial Segregation For Pool Proposed

Segregated use of McKinley Tech swimming pool on different days by whites and Negroes this summer was suggested last night by the Metropolis View Citizens Association.

The idea was broached in a telegram to the House District subcommittee which will consider today the McMillan bill to vest control of District recreation facilities in the District Commissioners.

The association "urgently" requested that the pool be made available to white swimmers of the Northeast area this summer, and said the pool would be used to capacity if this took place.

In its meeting at the Noyes School, the group suggested split use of the pool as "a fair solution" if an alternative to exclusive white use must be found.

The telegram, signed by President Lewis N. Spangler, stated that the group opposed nonsegregation as discriminatory to whites and inciting to riot.

Harry S. Wender, chairman of the District Recreation Board, last week testified before the House subcommittee that the board would be willing to try nonsegregation at the Tech pool in a compromise that would permit three pools to be reserved for whites and two for Negroes.

The association asked the District traffic department to check dangerous conditions at 7th and Franklin sts. ne. Gilbert Bennert was appointed chairman of a nominating committee, and Spangler was named a delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations to replace Martin DeBroske.

Columbia Heights

The methods used in conducting the daylight saving poll were protested last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association as placing an added burden on Metropolitan police. The poll isn't really getting the opinion of all the residents of the District, the group declared.

Meeting at the Columbia Heights Christian Church Hall, the group voted to favor construction of an athletic stadium and an indoor swimming pool at Coolidge High School, opposed any change in the name of Roosevelt High School, and opposed a further transit fare increase.

Palisades

The Palisades Citizens Association last night voted to adopt an association emblem depicting the development of the community.

In another action at the meeting in the Palisades Field House, the group assigned a committee to look into the possibility of getting wider coverage of the activities of citizens associations in the newspapers.

Resolutions adopted indorsed the five-day, 40-hour week for policemen, favored daylight saving time, and repeal of the personal property tax.

N. Cleveland Park

The North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night indorsed the 5-day, 40-hour week for policemen, daylight saving time, and voted to oppose the Capital Transit Co.'s request for a fare increase.

W. A. Gallahan reported to the meeting at the Hearst School on the results of a survey of the conditon of alleys, sidewalks and vacant lots in the community.

The Recreation Department was asked to finish clearing the grounds around the Hearst School.

Perry St. Parking Ban Is Voted by Mt. Rainier Council

The Mt. Rainier town council voted last night to impose an immediate parking ban on both sides in the block of Perry st. leading off Rhode Island ave. from 7 to 9:30 a. m.

Perry st., adjacent to the streetcar and bus terminal, recently has been blocked by parked cars

The council also voted to convert 30 overhead street lights from 100 to 250 candlepower as follows: Upshur st., 28th st. and Rainier ave.; Rainier ave.; 30th st.; Queen's Chapel rd. and Upshur st.; 29th st., Bunker Hill rd. to Upshur st.; Bunker Hill rd.

Officials Indicate No Progress on D. C. Pool Problem

District and Federal officials were called into a closed-door meeting in the office of House District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), yesterday for discussion of Washington swimming pools.

The meeting was a sequel to a hearing last week on McMillan's bill to transfer the pools from the control of the Interior Department, and place them under the District Commissioners.

Members indicated the meeting made no progress toward a solution of the questions raised by the bill. Next step is a meeting slated for today by the subcommittee considering the McMillan bills. It was called by Chairman Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.).

'Andy' Bowen, Former Fighter In D. C., Dies of Cancer

Henry Harold (Andy) Bowen, 52, a famous lightweight boxer here after World War 1, died of cancer yesterday in Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Mr. Bowen

Bowen's family said he had been seriously ill for five weeks.

Ray Bowen, brother Andy's and a fight referee, recalled yesterday that his brother had had more than 400 bouts in the course of a career that ran from 1918 to 1927.

Andy came here from his native New Castle, Pa., at the age of 20 to take a job as lifeguard at the old Tidal Basin beach. Under the guidance of Gordon Leech, then concessionaire at the beach, Bowen went into professional boxing.

Bowen became a frequent exhibitor at Ardmore and Kenilworth, Md., at the old Washington Barracks and the old Washington Auditorium—the boxing centers of those days.

Among his brother's more noteworthy achievements, Ray recalled, was beating Goldie Ahearn three out of the five times they met.

In 1942 Bowen enlisted and served in the Army Air Corps for two years. For the past year he been working as a guard at the Navy Yard. He was a member of the Dupont Post, American Legion.

In addition to his brother Ray, Bowen is survived by four other brothers, George, who lives in California, and Eddie, William and Johnny, who live in Washington. All the Bowen boys have had some boxing experience. His mother, Mrs. Mary Catherine Bowen, 14 4th st. se.; a sister Mrs. Daisy Lockard and a son, Buddy Bowen, 25, also survive.

The American Legion will hold services at the Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. at 8 p. m. Thursday. Funeral services will be held at funeral home at 12:30 p. m. Friday. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Everybody's Traveling In the Garner Family

By Marie McNair

ROBERT L. GARNER, vice president of the International Bank, returning Easter Day from a European trip, will soon be bidding his mother, Mrs. Robert V. Garner, goodby.

All that stands between Mrs. Garner and England is a boat. Her passport and visas are in order; her sister, Mrs. H. C. Omerle of New York, who'll be her traveling companion, is here. But the rush to Europe is on, and Mrs. Garner can't get a cabin!

Meanwhile, she'll have to move from the house on Garfield st., which she's been occupying with her son, as its owner, Rear Admiral S. C. Hooper is coming back next week.

When Mr. Garner returns he'll have seen his daughter, Joan, in Paris to study art, and he'll have a brief reunion here with his son, Bob, on Easter vacation from Lehigh University. Mr. Garner's trip, in connection with the International Bank, took him to Paris, London and Southern Rhodesia.

Heading for Warrenton's Gold Cup Races

THROUGH Virginia's budding countryside this weekend there will be a cavalcade heading for the Virginia Gold Cup races at Warrenton on Saturday. Others will go down before for the dinner Friday to be given by Admiral and Mrs. Neil Phillips at Bellevue, their hilltop home in the heart of the hunt country.

All will stay for Pete Vogel's cocktail party after the races at Broadview, his estate over which the course is run. And it's safe to say Washington will have generous representation at the annual Gold Cup dinner dance Saturday night, to be held this year at the Warrenton Country School, with Ted Straeter and his orchestra coming down from New York to play.

Luncheons before the six steeplechase and flat races will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Amory Carhart at Ashland Farm; Mr. and Mrs. Russel Arundel at their house on the peak of Wild Cat Mountain; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Schoiz at Woodbourne; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Greene at Hunting Ridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill at Clovelly Farms.

Lieut. Gen. Wade Haislip and Mrs. Haislip drop everything when the Gold Cup day rolls around and they'll be there again this year when the bugle blows. Others from Washington will be Gen. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Assistant Secretary of State George McGhee and Mrs. McGhee, whose country place, Farmer's Delight is at nearby Middleburg; Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Byer, Rear Admiral and Mrs. J. J. Clark, Mrs. Arthur Wood, Senator Leverett Saltonstall, Gen. Sir William Morgan, and Gen. and Mrs. Howard C. Davidson.

The Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray are expected to be there and then—Hugh Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wisner, Col. and Mrs. James W. Lewis, the Alec Hagners, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George W. Perkins, Rear Admiral Lewis L. Straus, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin B. Graves, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. C. T. Clagett and Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Bramwell, the Charles Humes and Mrs. Marcella Dupont.

Ambassador's Wife Guest at Banquet

SENORA de BOETTNER, wife of the Ambassador of Paraguay, was among the guests at Mrs. James Dewey Cunningham's table for the Washington Opera Guild's cocktail party and hat show by Mme. Chautemps yesterday at Mardi Gras restaurant. Also guests of Mrs. Cunningham were Senora Contreras, wife of the Dominican Minister; Senora de Gallego, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Colombian Embassy; Senora Ana Luisa Branger, Cultural Attache of the Venezuelan Embassy; Mrs. Richard Daly, and Mrs. George Vik.

The Netherlands Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens will have for tea this afternoon members of Birmingham's Citizenship Tour, a group of 30 or more Alabama high school students visiting Washington under the auspices of Representative Laurie C. Battle.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin will give a supper party Thursday evening for the students and will have as a special guest Miss Josephine Black, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black.

Dale Alden Tudder Will Be Christened

DALE ALDEN TUDDER, daughter of Lieut. and Mrs. Elwin Bailey Tudder, will be christened on Saturday at 4 p. m. in St. John's Church, Norwood Parish, Chevy Chase, Md. Afterward there will be an informal reception at Lieutenant and Mrs. Tudder's home.

The baby, a fourth generation Washingtonian, will have as godparents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Craig Britton of San Jose, Calif., and their proxies will be Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Goode Baptist. Miss D. Irene Chrisinger will be a godmother.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip N. Davison of Washington and Mr. and Mrs. John M. Tudder of San Jose are the baby's grandparents.

Mrs. Hechinger Fetes Town Hostesses

MRS. SIDNEY L. HECHINGER was hostess at a cocktail party and tea in her Westchester apartment yesterday in honor of the junior and senior hostesses of the Embassy Tour and Tea. The Tour, which will be held on April 22, will be for the benefit of Goodwill Industries.

Among the guests attending the party were Mrs. Oscar Chapman, chairman of the junior hostesses; Mrs. Henry Alves, chairman of the senior hostesses; and Mrs. Clifford Davis, who with Mrs. Alves is cochairman of both hostess groups.

Lieut. Col. Albert L. Cox, jr., USAF, will be host at cocktails on Saturday, April 15 at Anderson House where he makes his home, in honor of Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece who will arrive on Thursday from Athens.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Efficient Government Girl Desperately Wants To Be Charming, But Stomach and Tongue Get Tense When She Tries to Converse; Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Before you prescribe psychiatric help for me I hasten to say I've had it, and my insight into my problem tells me what I lack and what I should do—but I can't do it.

I have a very responsible job in Government. I am an efficient and capable stenographer, but I lack the self confidence to promote my ideas. Meeting people terrifies me, although I face them every day and have become adept at controlling myself. But why do my stomach and tongue grow tense when I try to narrate an experience? I simply cannot tell a story or joke successfully. I feel my hearers are drifting and I lose my thoughts.

Don't label me neurotic or terribly maladjusted. I am neither. Inwardly I am nervous, tense, uncertain, yes; but outwardly I am a very personable character and considered an attractive woman. My education is average—a few years in college, another few years in the business world; but in all my experience I've never felt complete mastery of my inner tensions.

Tries to Sparkle But Fails at It

FOR several years I've been in love with a very superior fellow. I don't feel even partially worthy of him, but of course I act animated, try scintillating conversation and end up feeling I should hide my head. My feelings of inadequacy are so profound they warp my judgment and pull me far below normal in business and social situations.

Much in my background wasn't too pleasant. I come of a large family whom I love, but I lack respect for their accomplishments. Until recently I thought I could find myself by traveling about the country and finding "the one" and myself simultaneously. But now I come to you, perhaps in the hope of some word that will help me feel I can conquer my blackfringed fears. B. W.

Feels Ashamed of Her Origin

DEAR B. W.: Possibly you've had a brush with psychiatric practice, but if so, you didn't stick long enough to scratch the surface of your problem, whatever it is.

It is my impression that you grew up in an environment where you felt your family to be "dirt beneath the feet" of the social elite in that community. Therefore, unconsciously you've felt socially hexed by your origins ever since. Hence your neurotic striving to be somebody else than the person you are, an obsessional drive that probably accounts for the terrible tensions and contradictions of your personality.

It strikes me that all your life you've been rejecting yourself without knowing the worth or contents of the package, acting on the unconscious conviction that in view of the label and visible markings, it must be trash. Help for that sort of thing consists (1) in catching the drift of senseless self loathing, and (2) then beginning to turn an open mind to the real self, so as to arrive at pure cognition of one's assets.

Specialist Help Seems Necessary

AS a person sees himself clearly, and as he accepts responsibility for making good use of his real qualities to that extent does he acquire deep dignity and self respect. These attributes of moral maturity are, after all, the by-product of essentially honest living.

It seems to me you can't dissolve your blackfringed fears without some further help from psychiatry, to serve as pilot, interpreter and objective critic in bringing you to constructive terms with the self you are. M. H.

Your Figure, Madame

Stork Brings Figure Problems in Baby's Wake

By Ida Jean Kain

THE MOST desperate letters for help with weight problems come from young mothers who are having a difficult time getting their figures back to normal. Two letters this week seem exact opposites, for one mother gained too much weight during pregnancy and the other gained the excess weight following the baby's arrival. But both are nutrition problems.

The first writes: "During my last pregnancy I kept wanting to eat, and my weight went up to 162 pounds. After the baby arrived, I did not get back to normal weight as I had with the first baby. Nor have I lost my stomach and hips. I am now eating sensibly and losing weight, but realize I must have special exercises to get back in shape."

The other new mother was delighted on arriving home from the hospital to find her weight normal, but the new baby made her nervous and she turned to overeating, and went from 138 to 170 pounds. "I thought the intense craving was actual hunger, but now know it was 'nerves.' When the baby was exhausted and slept, I was exhausted . . . and ate."

Another common complaint from new mothers is that they build up such an appetite during the pregnancy period that they can't seem to curb the appetite after the baby is born.

Control Weight During Pregnancy

THE first precaution is to control the weight gain during pregnancy. Doctors are now emphatically against an excess gain during this time. But let me make it abundantly clear that a weight-control diet for expectant mothers is vastly different from an ordinary reducing diet.

Pregnancy is a period of growth, and the protective foods which furnish the growth material must be increased. These are milk, eggs, fruits, vegetables, lean meat and whole grains. Nonessential foods, however, including rich desserts, candy, cakes, etc., must be decreased—otherwise the total calories will be too high and an undesirable weight gain the result.

Calories need not be materially stepped up until the last three months of pregnancy, and then not more than 20 percent. This may seem quite a boost, but actually on a diet of 220 calories (adequate for the expectant mother doing light exercise), the increase would be 440 calories . . . which could be met by the addition of two glasses of whole milk and a slice of whole grain bread and butter.

Food Can't Take Place of Rest

TOO many mothers try to gain strength by overeating instead of by getting adequate rest. Excess food cannot take the place of needed rest. One baby doctor gives this excellent bit of advice to wornout mothers: "Don't drag wearily through the day—plan to rest for 10 minutes out of every hour." During this brief respite, practice letting go with your mind and your muscles—relax.

To whip right into exercise shortly after the baby arrives seems almost too much to ask of a new mother. But conditioning exercises at this time are more important than at any other time in a woman's life.

The time to begin postpregnancy exercises depends on the individual. In normal cases, the new mother is stronger for taking a few exercises during the recuperative period while still in bed. These are so mild as to hardly be considered calisthenics. Most doctors have a few favorite exercises they suggest.

By the third week after baby's birth, most mothers are ready for more exercise. Please get your doctor's permission before taking these corrective calisthenics. The number of times to perform each exercise depends on your strength. Stop before you are tired.

POSITION: Lying on back on bed, knees bent, soles of feet on bed, arms down at sides.

MOVEMENT: Resting weight on soles of feet and shoulders, raise the abdomen and hips from the bed, pushing upward as high as possible. Then fling arms back of head. Return to position and repeat, not more than five times.

POSITION: Lying on back on bed, knees bent, soles of feet on bed, arms down at sides.

MOVEMENT: Keeping legs together, bring knees toward chest until thighs touch abdomen. Then return to position.

POSITION: Kneeling with head resting on folded arms on floor. Hips and knees should be in vertical line.

MOVEMENT: Forcibly contract the abdominal muscles by pulling up-and-in. Repeat up to six times, then relax completely.

PARRY-PHRASING

Daddy's in the Army Now—So He's a Hero to Paula

By Ellen Buell Parry

"DADDY, that will be wonderful. You can be a hero," said 7-year-old Paula Pace (visions of conquering heroes on prancing jeeps dancing in her head) when she heard about the appointment of her father as Secretary of the Army. And then Frank Pace, jr.'s little daughter stepped into the family Buick, christened "Sir Jack" by 5-year-old sister Pricilla and herself, and said, "Congratulations, Sir Jack, on being the car of the Secretary of the Army."

As Director of the Budget—the job Mr. Pace is vacating—he had no such glamour in the small fry's eyes.

"HOW will you feel about having gold braid and uniforms around instead of stiff collared financial experts?" I asked Mrs. Pace, whose husband is going from Director of the Budget to his new role.

"Frank was in the Air Force three years. I'm used to uniforms," replied blond, blue-eyed, trim Mrs. Pace. The new Army Secretary's wife has a beautiful voice with a decided Philadelphia accent. She was Margaret Janney, a twin, from a family of six children, living in Bryn Mayr. She met her husband through her brother, at Princeton with Frank Pace.

Here the Paces live in an attractive, white brick house in Kent, run by Mrs. Pace, a cook, and a part-time handy man.

"I've never been much of a cook," says Mrs. Pace, "but I took a Cordon Bleu course that Madame Beran gave at the Y.W., and my husband says our meals have improved 100 percent."

"We've done little entertaining since we've been here, mainly because Frank has had to be out of town so much. Maybe we can do more now. My husband is terribly gregarious."

"We both believe exercise is important. Tennis is our favorite sport. Frank plays a lot of squash, too, in the winter.

"My outside activities? Woman's National Democratic Club and League of Women Voters mainly. I'm a member of the Junior League, but haven't had a chance to do much work for it here.

"We've lived in Washington longer than any place, since we've been married. I spent two years in Frank's home town, Little Rock, Ark., before we came to Washington, in 1946.

"We both adore Washington."

MRS. FRANK PACE, JR., AND DAUGHTERS PRICILLA, 5, AND PAULA, 7

. . . Congratulations, Daddy, on being Secretary of the Army!

Wired Bras Have Universal Acceptance

Some women are still a little hesitant about wearing wired bars but their number is diminishing every day. The wired bra is no longer just a fad but is now achieving universal acceptance among smart women. In fact there are various sorts of wired bras to suit every type of figure. Even a woman of fuller figure and mature years can be fitted with a wired bra.

No longer does a wired bra mean something to be worn under a strapless dress. As a matter of fact, those with wires underneath instead of at the top are probably the most comfortable bra a woman can wear.

For Passover Festivities, Anne Offers Recipe for Crimsel, a Golden Fried Delicacy Which Is Made of Matzos

"OUT of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage," came the children of Israel centuries ago.

This week—April 1 through 9, to be exact—their descendants are celebrating their exodus with special prayers and foods.

It's the food that has prompted a number of readers to write in search of recipes. One of its chief staples is matzos, the traditional unleavened wafers. A manufacturer of Kosher products estimates 12 million pounds of these will be eaten by American Jews during the Passover period.

A recipe featuring matzos and sent us by this company is for Crimsel, a golden brown, fried delicacy.

CRIMSEL

4 eggs, separated
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sugar
¼ cup peanut oil
¼ cup seeded raisins
¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Soak matzos until soft. Drain and press dry. Place matzos in bowl and mash thoroughly. Add salt and egg yolks. Add sugar, rains, peanut oil and cinnamon. Mix well. Add stiffly beaten egg whites and fold into batter. Drop by spoonsful into hot, shallow peanut oil and fry until golden brown. Dust with powdered sugar and ground almonds. Serve very hot.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me if anyone in town gives whistling lessons? I know there is such a thing because I knew someone years ago who made great progress on being coached. H. E., Washington.

Haven't the name of a single professor of whistling in my files, but maybe some reader is better fixed in this regard.

DEAR ANNE:

I have an old kerosene lamp which is nickel color. I have been told that it is possible to remove the nickel and have the lamp brass. I would like to know how to remove the nickel finish.

MRS. CLARENCE A. WATKINS
Claremore Farm, Ashton, Md.

First step in this job is to determine whether the nickel is plated on brass—if you don't already know for sure.

You can file down the nickel finish in some obscure spot—on the bottom, for instance—and see if you strike brass. Or you can take a bit of it off with aqua regia, a chemical combination made by mixing three parts of hydrochloric acid (commercial grade) and one part nitric acid (12 normal).

You can buy these in small quantities at a drugstore. Warm in flameproof glassware, then put a few drops on the metal. (Handle the acid with care.) Leave drops on nickel a few minutes, then rub with cloth. Repeat if necessary.

If the lamp proves to be nickel plated on brass, you can remove all the plating with aqua regia. However, it might be simpler and more satisfactory to take the lamp to one of the firms listed under "Platers" in the yellow section of the telephone book to have the plating removed.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

PETUNIA!
Heavens, such a headache!
And how I groan and grouse!
There's not a single ice bag
In the whole blame house!

Then use a rubber glove, Petunia! Fill it with cracked ice, and it works fine!

ANN CROWLEY, the 19-year-old musical comedy star now at the Mayflower Lounge, got her big break at the tender age of 15. She won a place in the singing ensemble of Oklahoma. Then at 16 she was made understudy to the lead "Laurie." One day she was called out of her classes at Julia Richmond High School and told that Leading Lady Betty Jane Watson was sick. Associated Press sent the story all over the country, and Ann took over the role several times after that.

Stepping across the street to the Carousel company's theater, Ann confounded the cronologists even more. She had the part of a mother of nine children; they were all older than the mother, who at that time was 17. Ann went with Carousel to Chicago and then back to New York and Oklahoma. With the Oklahoma company she traveled again, getting as far as the Old Drury Lane Theater in London.

Now at 19 Ann Crowley has added night clubs to her activities between shows. For the next month she'll sing show tunes in the Lounge, with Henry Brandon's orchestra to back her up.

DON'T be alarmed if you see a little chimp, all dressed up in a cowboy suit, strolling down 14th st. He's Bingo, the Lotus' latest star. Walter DeHoman is responsible for the phenomenon of "the chimp with the human mind." DeHoman has expended a great deal of time, patience, and loving kindness in grooming Bingo for the stage.

NOW the intelligent little animal delights in cavorting about the stage on his tricycle, doing head to head handbalancing with DeHoman, or just obeying commands. Television and pictures are finding the pair tops in appeal.

With the two, opening tomorrow at the Lotus, are Sinclair and Alda, a ballroom team. Their past engagements have been at the Chase Hotel in St. Louis, the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, and the William Penn in Pittsburgh.

Peggy Palmer is the tap dancer of the show. Cute and talented, she was trained by New York's Henry LeTang.

Bill Would Ban 'Influence Sale'

Senator Butler (R., Nebr.) yesterday introduced a bill designed to prevent Government officials from resigning their jobs to "sell" their influence.

The measure would bar such officials for two years from representing any private interest in proceedings before the agency by which they formerly were employed.

Butler said the legislation would not apply to officials who left the Government before its enactment, nor to those whose terms expired or who were ousted from their jobs.

A third exemption would be provided for all officers and employes of the judicial branch of the Government.

Butler said in a statement that the practice of Government officials resigning their positions "so as to 'sell' their influence with their former agencies to business firms, organized lobbies and other persons" is widespread.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Pius Received More Than a Million Soldiers

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

By Kees Van Hoek

Foreign Affairs Writer of The Irish Times.

Chapter XVIII—The Father Among His Children

THE LIBERATION of Rome by the Allied armies caused a revolutionary change in Vatican etiquette. Up until then even general audiences had been conducted under strict rules, but all this went by the board when tens of thousands of soldiers, fresh from their campaigns, clamored to see the Pope.

Pius set an hour aside for them almost every day and mixed freely among them, giving his ring to kiss to those who considered themselves his sons in faith, shaking hands with non-Catholics who, unaware of palace protocol, held out theirs. Up till then no private camera had ever passed the watchful eyes of Vatican sentries, but now the Pope posed obligingly. All in all he received more than a million and a half soldiers. They came from every corner of the earth, wiry Mexicans and slender Senegalese, tall blond Texans and thick-lipped Africans from near the Equator, burly Canadian Mounties and tiny Annamites.

To all he handed personally a medal or rosary. What at first startled him, but soon amused him, was to hear himself addressed by Protestant Americans as "Mr. Pope" instead of "Your Holiness." What touched him most was a request from Polish officers to be allowed to carry him in his Sedia Gestatoria on their shoulders; these heroes of many battles were now a people without a country, the new Israelites carrying in exile their Ark of the Covenant.

Compassion

ONE DAY after the army audiences were over, the Pope's Great Chamberlain noticed an Italian soldier who had not dared enter the audience chamber. His shoes were tied together by bits of string; what passed for his uniform was little better than dirty rags; his haggard face unshaven. He was indeed a shocking change from the impeccably turned-out Allied military. The Pope had already returned to his library when his chamberlain told him of this man who had lacked the courage to show his rags amidst the razor-sharp-pressed-trousers of his victors. "If you can still find him bring him here," said the Pope. Ushered into the library the soldier was so weighed down by this singular distinction that he could not utter a word.

The Pope beckoned him in friendly fashion toward him, held out his ring, but the defeated warrior knelt down on both knees, bowed his head, took the hem of the Pope's cassock and reverently kissed it; then with a new happiness lighting up his weary face, still too moved to hear the Pope's questions, he slowly walked out of the presence.

However fatiguing such daily audiences must be to a hard-working man in his seventies, they mean a great deal to Pius XII. What gives him infinite pleasure is the way in which occasionally he is asked to receive, without proper introduction; like once when 20 boys, without telling their priest or teacher, marched to the Vatican on the day of their first Holy Communion and announced to the Swiss guards that they had been good boys and could they please see the Holy Father.

Among the innovations of his predecessor which Pius XII continued are the special audiences for newly wedded couples. Even in days of heavy preoccupation they meant much to him. Once in the middle of the war he told such a group: "You cannot realize what intense joy it is to me, what real consolation, to be among you for a few moments. I feel like a father overworked at his place of business, beset by all sorts of troubles, who finds relaxation and a new courage in the few moments that he can be amidst his children."

Pope Pius XII, robed in white, composes a memorandum on a typewriter in his library at the Vatican

Gave Communion

ON THE first Christmas after the liberation of Rome, he himself insisted on giving Holy Communion to those thronging the altar rails of St. Peter's, and he asked the foreign soldiers to sing their English, French and Polish hymns during his mass. When he sang mass at midnight on Christmas Eve, 1949, after the inauguration of the Holy Year, knowing that for the first time in many years there was a strong contingent of German pilgrims again in the Basilica, he asked them to sing that immortal German Christmas hymn, born in the heart of a simple Austrian country priest, "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht" ("Silent Night, Holy Night") and never did it sound more moving than that night among all the solemnity of the world's greatest Church.

The first measure which Pius XII had taken, the very day that war was declared, was to call into being again an Uffizio Informazioni. He himself happened to be secretary of the Office for Extraordinary Affairs in the Vatican State Department when war broke out in 1914 and he had founded the original office. The Vatican wanted to help as much as possible where humanitarian help could still be rendered, to prove to a nonbelieving world that the brotherhood in Christ, which is the foundation of the Church, is not an empty formula.

The task, however, was much more difficult under total war between 1939 and 1945 than it had been from 1914 to 1918. The totalitarian states did not only surround their prison camps with electrically charged barbed wire, they isolated them against every link between the prisoners and their homeland and families. The ceaseless efforts of the Pope through letters and diplomatic notes to alleviate the fate of prisoners, to allow messages and visits of neutral observers; to obtain particulars, meant one long and tough battle which could never be relaxed.

Talent for Action

HE himself led it from his own desk. Nobody had expected this ascetic man of prayer to have so much talent for organization. His telephone connected him directly with all the offices and many times a day he used it for his quick and shrewd decisions. Hundreds of typewriters were set up underneath the frescoes and alongside the gobelins of the State Department. An average of 2000 letters a day went out from the Vatican throughout all these years, to reach via nuntius or bishops, the curate of the remotest village or the missionary in deepest jungle—letters seeking information on people. The barge of the fisherman was turned into a life boat for prisoners and missing persons, for refugees and deportees; and entire new departments were created to help procure food and medical supplies, clothing and shoes. The Vatican could no longer provide all the office space that was needed and the San Carlo Palace was turned into additional headquarters. Priests, monks and nuns did the work voluntarily, yet the organization involved was so colossal that it cost hundreds of millions of lira, to which the United States, Argentina, Spain, Ireland and Switzerland helped contribute most.

'Stateless' Davis Is Released From Ellis Island

New York, April 4 (AP).—World Citizen Garry Davis was freed from Ellis Island Monday after being held since his arrival from France Thursday.

"Let me slip into oblivion," he begged newsmen as he rejoined his father, orchestra leader Meyer Davis, at the ferry pier.

"I really do not have anything to say," he said. "I'm here as a private citizen."

Davis, 28-year-old United States Air Force combat veteran, gave up his American citizenship two years ago in Paris to become a self-styled citizen of the world.

He returned to the United States last week with an immigrant's visa. It would permit him to apply for citizenship again after meeting residential requirements.

However, he told newsmen on his arrival: "I intend to remain stateless."

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

The Atom Has Developed A Split Personality

"World destruction," muses Kathleen Chaimas of 1865 Park rd. nw., "is a possibility we must face. But there's one consolation. If an atomic bomb does wipe out the human race, there won't be anybody left to say: 'I told you so.'"

ADD DEFINITIONS

Money: Catalyst that changes a radical into a conservative.

FAN CLUB

Somebody ought to write a song dedicated to pinch-hitters who take the third strike with the wood on their shoulders: "After The Ball Is Over, Dearie, It's Too Late to Swing Your Bat."

IMPROVING THE BREED

I went to Laurel, where a guy
Said: "Bub, ja hear tha news?
Bet all ya got on Number Four;
It's fixed, and he can't lose."

I bet my dough, I heard the roar
As they came down the track;
Alas, alack—my horse was last
And I am walking back.

MISCELLANY

The Mitchell Park Playground Mothers' Club has raised enough money to buy the kids a record player, and now if they had some records (or money to buy same) they'd be in pretty good shape. Mrs. Bernard Koteen of 1310 New Hampshire ave. nw. will be glad to hear from donors . . . My upcoming pennant race predictions are causing a controversy even before they're announced. Steve Douglas and Dutch Bergman of WRC say they like to submit their own forecasts and are willing to bet they'll come closer than I do. And Bob Wolff of WWDC and WTTG will also submit a set of predictions, on the theory that: "Bergman can't pick 'em in baseball. He thinks Washington's best pitcher is Sammy Baugh" . . . The way the Nat hurling staff is shaping up, maybe Wolff is kidding on the square . . . Mrs. John R. Nicholson, jr., of 808 Bashford lane, Alexandria, Va., thoughtfully enclosed a dollar for Children's Hospital with her recent Give-Away offering of cats and kittens . . . Latest addition to WTOP's announcing staff is John F. Trimble, whose voice isn't exactly new to the Washington airwaves. John did Sunday newscasts on WINX during the war, while Uncle Sam had him stationed here . . . Ruth M. Reiter of 5759 13th st. nw. tells me that if I always remember to put the carbon paper into the typewriter with the shiny side toward me, I'll never get it reversed. The trouble is that when I put a new sheet into my typewriter I'm always so preoccupied with trying to think of some funny words to put on it that I forget this is the Age of Quadruplicates.

MOVED & SECONDED

A few days ago I told about Zach Balian, jr., of 1810 Wisconsin ave. nw., who was struck down by a truck on the way home from school, and as a result couldn't accept an invitation to join the District Liners at their next club meeting.

I suggested that the club ought to suspend its rules and vote Zach into membership by mail. Mrs. Gertrude Lehman of 65 W st. nw. and Bob Holmgren of 1708 Newton st. nw. jointly second the motion.

Club President Nate Leiderman of 1508 41st st. se. promises that a formal motion will be presented at the next meeting—and I'm sure he won't need any steamroller tactics to get it through.

And Perry S. Hall of 6715 44th ave., Hyattsville, Md., sends along a little verse that Zach—and all of us—would do well to keep in mind:

"'Safety First' should be the phrase . . . For drivers to repeat . . . While rolling down the highway . . . Or on the city street . . . And boys and girls en route to school . . . Should watch the signals, too . . . For danger may be just ahead . . . In spite of all you do."

RAINY DAY NOTE

Persistent today is the rumor
The Good Humor man's in bad humor.

Nelson C. Hyde.

TWIN BILL

Roger Hunt of 1513 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, Md., wonders whether we noticed the double feature at the Cameo Theater recently. It was:

"The Hatchet Man," and "Farewell to Arms."

STREET SCENE

John D. Pendleton of 4912 New Hampshire ave. nw., saw an unusual sight on Irving st. nw. recently: A "Call Carl" wrecker towing in a "Call Carl" pickup truck.

YOUNGER GENERATION

"Why can't a fisherman be generous?" asked my 14-year-old relative.

"I'll bite," I said. "Why can't a fisherman be generous?"

"Because," the young corn merchant grinned, "his profession makes him sell fish."

CAP Offers Air Training For 'Teeners

If you are between 15 and 18 years of age and want to learn all about military and civil aviation, here's your chance.

The Civil Air Patrol, an auxiliary to the U. S. Air Force, is just revving up a program for boys and girls of these ages, who, over a two-year period, can be indoctrinated in such subjects as navigation, engines, model aircraft, aircraft structures, theory of flight, aviation history.

In addition, cadets will get indoctrination flights in aircraft assigned to CAP by the United States Air Force. Cadets get the program without charge, and are issued olive drab uniforms with special insignia.

Classes are given once weekly at the University of Maryland, Air ROTC, and at local airfields and Air Force bases.

Upcoming feature of the program is a two-week summer encampment at Andrews Air Force Base late in August.

For further information, call Republic 5711, extension 577 or 578, and ask for the Civil Air Patrol cadet recruiting officer.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Old Gripe Seen in CAB Fight

By Drew Pearson

The power one member of Congress can wield over a Government agency has seldom been demonstrated more shockingly than in a backstage drama involving Martinetish Congressman John J. Rooney, New York Democrat.

Pearson

Rooney is threatening to stymie the vital air-safety program of the Civil Aeronautics Board—following a personal gripe against able CAB Chairman Joseph J. O'Connell, jr. As boss of a House subappropriation committee, Rooney recently slashed a hefty $923,000 from the CAB's modest $4,323,000 budget request.

If approved by Congress, this amazing 23 per cent cut will mean that the CAB's overworked staff of 640 people—smallest of any independent agency in the Government—must be reduced by 100.

More important, it would mean an almost inevitable letdown in inspection facilities to insure maximum safety. Many lives would be placed in jeopardy.

Close friends say that Rooney has never forgiven O'Connell, a fellow New York Democrat, for remarking at a banquet a year and a half ago that the New York Congressmen didn't spend enough time in Washington.

Rooney Gets Revenge

A truer remark was never made—which may be why it stung Rooney so deeply. At any rate the New York Congressman gave the CAB chairman one of the most abusive grillings an agency chief has ever received at a recent closed-door session.

As the hearing started Rooney roughly ordered O'Connell not to talk about additional Civil Aeronautics personnel, "who I know now are not going to be approved."

"You say you know now they are not going to be approved?" asked the surprised O'Connell.

"Yes," roared Rooney, "I am quite sure of that."

"Then it seems rather silly to be discussing anything that has already been decided," replied the CAB chairman with a futile gesture.

Note—Later, when O'Connell asked if he might ask a question to clarify a point raised during the hearings, Rooney shouted, "No!"

McCarthy Gyrations

Those who have watched the gyrations of harum-scarum Senator Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin now believe they have tracked down the source of some of his wild statements, and that he is being fed by Fascist-Minded Joseph Kamp, now under conviction for contempt of Congress.

McCarthy has vacillated all the way from claiming 207 card-carrying Communists in the State Department down to 57 Communists, though he has not yet been able to prove one. After making these statements, he has retreated from claiming card-carrying Communists to "Communist sympathizers and fellow travelers." And, after stating on the Senate floor February 20 that "I will not say anything under the cloak of immunity that I would not say anywhere else . . . and that day I will resign from the Senate," he is now leaning over backward to protect himself against a libel suit. In fact, he even stamped advance copies of his speech sent to the Senate press gallery with the notation that he was acting "as the agent for the Senate," in order to protect himself against libel.

A comparison of McCarthy's charges with those of Fascist Joe Kamp shows they are almost identical. In case after case, McCarthy almost paraphrases charges made by Kamp in some of his inflammatory publications which have received the hearty indorsement of the Ku Klux Klan.

Kamp, original name Kampf, was born in Yorktown, N. Y., made several trips to Germany, and finally shipped his German-born father back to the fatherland shortly bebore the war started. He was convicted in 1948 for contempt of Congress, and this conviction was affirmed by the Court of Appeals."

Kerr Bill Battle

Here's the inside story of how supporters of the Kerr bill manipulated the votes to jam it through the House of Representatives last week.

Actually the bill was defeated on the first roll call by a vote of 179 to 173.

However, just before the outcome could be announced, Congressmen from the Southwestern States swarmed into the well of the House demanding to know how they had been recorded on the roll call. This was a delaying tactic.

Meanwhile Representative Charles Halleck, of Indiana, who led the fight for the Kerr bill on the Republican side, also appeared in the House well. Halleck asked Lewis Deschler, House parliamentarian, who was standing behind the tally clerk:

"What's the score, Lew?"

Before Deschler could answer, Speaker Rayburn, who was presiding, informed Halleck that two more votes were needed if the bill was to be saved from defeat. In other words, it was up to Halleck to produce two switch votes on the Republican side.

How well he succeeded may be attested by the fact that not two but three Republicans, who had voted against the Kerr bill, soon appeared in the House well and informed Rayburn that they would like to change their vote and be recorded as for the bill.
